"Let each man exercise the art he knows best."

— ARISTOPHANES

Every musician, every singer, every dancer and actor seen and heard here today, whether performing solo or ensemble, is to be individually thanked. Thanked for dreaming of moments when they can stand before you to entertain, enlighten, and amuse. Thanked for their time sacrificed to hone their skills. Thanked for seeking the arts as their form of expression.

We're all better for their efforts. James V. Zizzi understands labors of love, and his homes stand before you as testament. Which is why James V. Zizzi Contracting is a proud supporter of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.

The Phantom

Sitting Poolside in East and Southampton Absolutely For Free

By Dan Rattiner

"When you get to America, you will find the streets paved with gold," said the Mayor of Salerno in 1895.

It's getting downright strange and scary to relax in the Hamptons in the summer time. Two summers ago, we had a clearly obsessed man tackling women as they jogged down the beach in Amagansett and East Hampton. He'd wrestle them to the ground and attack them. But before anything serious would happen, he would run away. He got caught after police did a stakeout looking for him and he is presently in jail.

Last summer, there was a spree of purse robberies from cars parked in the lots at the beaches. People would leave their purses in their cars, chirp them locked, but leave the windows open a crack. In the dunes, a gang of thieves was watching. They would run over to the car, jimmy open the windows, snatch the purses and run off. They were caught in a sting operation at Sagg Main. Turned out to be two adults and two teenagers. All at this writing are either in jail or out on bail.

Now we have Samuel Ciopasiu, a 32-year-old Roumanian immigrant who speaks perfect

English. He came out here last summer and would stay during the week at mansions down at the beach that were in use on weekends, but vacant during the week. Finding an open window or an unlocked door, he would go in, relax in the living room and settle in. He'd use the car parked in the garage, the TV, the food in the refrigerator, some small change if he found it lying around, maybe he'd use a credit card if there was one lying around. He wasn't up a Mercedes Benz owned by some people on Ocean Drive, Bridgehampton. They came out the next weekend, of course, and though Ciopaslu had moved on, they noticed a few things weren't quite where they had been when they left. And they noted the dent in the car. They called the police. They said their home might have had an unexpected visitor during the week, but they weren't sure. None of the beds had been slept in.

In August, Ciopaslu woke up one morning at another house to find a team of gardeners out front trimming the hedges. He left the house in the owner's Mercedes and stopped to chat with the gardeners. He was a guest, he said. He told them they were doing a good job. Then he drove off, smiling and waving as he went down Further Lane.

In September, Ciopaslu was arrested poolside while sitting in a chaise lounge reading a newspaper (Dan's Papers?) at the home of some folks on Further Lane. A man mowing the lawn had alerted the police. In his call he said that the man poolside had been in swimming, had gone inside and eaten something in the refrigerator, then took a shower. He didn't know who this man was, but it wasn't anybody the owners knew as far as he knew. The police a burglar. He never stole anything large or expensive. And he wasn't Goldilocks either. He felt it would be an invasion of privacy to sleep in anyone's bed. And so he'd sleep on a couch in the living room. And when Wednesday and Thursday came along, figuring the owners would be out shortly, he would leave.

He did this last summer numerous times, as it turned out. And once he accidentally banged McDonald's is looking for a designer to create a new look for their employees and many Hamptons designers are in the running. Sean (P. Other designers in contention include Russell Simmons, Tommy Hilfiger and Damon Dash, all Hamptons residents. "We believe that restaurant employees are brand ambassadors, and this is a great opportunity to have crew uniforms which are reflective of that," said McDonald's spokesman, Bill Whitman.

Although details are still coming together, East Hampton's Billy Joel is planning a June 13 release for "12 Gardens Live," a double-disc souvenir of his record-breaking 12-night sell-out run at New York's Madison Square Garden. The January-March stint was part of Joel's first major solo tour in eight years, which will resume on June 26 in Vienna. The Columbia album would mark his first non-studio compilation release since 2001.

came and confronted Ciopaslu, who confessed he was just relaxing at this vacant home, and he offered to leave. They searched him. He had nothing stolen on him, but he did have the key to the people's Land Rover. Thus they cuffed him and hauled him away.

Later that month, he appeared in court and got sentenced to 90 days in the Riverhead jail. In late January, when he got out, he went right back to the Brille's house. He apparently remembered how nice it was. Then he left there but thought about how much he had been enjoying the Hamptons in the winter-time. It was so quiet and beautiful. And he didn't have to move out of one house and into another so often. Most of the houses were closed all winter. If he got in, he'd turn on the heat and water. Then after a few weeks or a month, he'd turn everything off and move on.

During the next three and a half months, he apparently stayed at the homes of at least half a dozen other people. Sometimes he'd be confronted by a housewatcher, but he'd always say how he was a cousin from the West Coast living there with permission, just for a few days. These homes were on Spaeth Lane and Further Lane, East Hampton, Mid Ocean Drive in Bridgehampton, and Sandune Court in Sagaponack. When arrested, he was driving a Porsche registered to someone on Heller Lane in East Hampton, but playing CDs from a CD container that apparently came from the home of some people on Further Lane in that town. It was also found that the day before he charged food at Citarella in Water Mill with a credit card he'd found at one of these homes. He also put on it charges for gas and coffee at Starbucks.

On April 29, a neighbor living in a house year round on Sandune Court in Sagaponack, saw somebody trying to find an open window at a house down the street that this neighbor knew was only occupied in the summertime. He called police. They came and they arrested Ciopasiu who once again offered no resistance.

This past Friday he was arraigned in East Hampton on four charges of second degree burglary, criminal possession of stolen property in the fourth degree, and two counts of fourth degree grand larceny. He was also charged with petit larceny, third degree criminal tampering and criminal possession of stolen property in the fifth degree.

These charges dovetail with charges filed against him the week before in Southampton Town for fourth degree criminal possession of stolen property, two counts of second degree forgery and second degree burglary, two counts of second degree criminal trespassing and one count of third degree criminal trespassing.

I have no idea what was going through Ciopasiu's mind during all of this. And neither do the police. When they asked him why he had stayed at all these homes he said he just liked living the high life. The police never got any deeper than that.

Is it possible that as a recent immigrant of Roumania, he didn't know really how things are done around these parts? After all, he was from a former Communist country where for many years everything was shared. Is it possible that he was making a statement for low cost housing? It is undeniably true that the number of bedrooms that remain unused all winter in homes in the Hamptons probably

Dan and Barbara

The Owners of B Smith's in Sag Harbor Have Heard Enough

By Dan Rattiner

Once again rumors have begun flying around about whether or not the B Smith's restaurant is going to reopen again this year on Sag Harbor's Long Wharf. It's reported that the two owners, Dan Gasby and Barbara Smith, are fighting and entering into a divorce. There is another report that they are fighting with their landlord Pat Malloy and he is trying to throw them out. There is another report that they are going bankrupt. There is another report that they have simply closed and are about to remove all the furniture so Malloy can find another tenant. It goes on and on.

"And it's right about this time of year that we begin again to get phone calls at our home cursing us and telling us to get the hell out," Dan Gasby told me. "We've been here nine years. This will be our tenth. I have always taken the high road about these calls, just ignoring them. But we have another ten years to go on our lease. We intend to use them. And it's about time what is going on here meets the light of day."

"Who calls?" I asked.

"They're always anonymous. And they almost always invoke religion," Gasby said.

"They'll say you black bitch, you can't own the restaurant. You fooled me," Barbara said.

Dan Gasby and Barbara Smith, by any standards, are a prominent and successful black couple on the national scene. Residents of Manhattan, they had already achieved considerable success before deciding to add to their businesses by opening a restaurant in Sag Harbor ten years ago.

Barbara Smith, known professionally as B Smith, is a former model who has become a TV personality with her own lifestyle show for more than a dozen years both on cable and network.

As for Dan Gasby, besides partnering with his wife with the restaurants, he is independently from her a successful national network and cable TV producer. He has produced numerous specials for CBS and others.

"We began coming here when we bought some land on Gardiner's Bay to build a vacation home in the Hamptons," Gasby said. "We had a young daughter. Then we thought we ought to have one of our restaurants here. And people warned us about it. Black people don't go into business in the Hamptons, we were told. You will never get white people to support you. I thought this had to be some kind of a joke."

Frankly, as I talked to Dan and Barbara about this situation, I thought myself this must be some kind of a joke. Who ever heard of this kind of prejudice out here? I've heard rumors about B Smith's. But that's all I thought they were. A restaurant closes for the winter and people wonder if it is coming back. These people are my friends. But then, I thought, what other black people own restaurants in the Hamptons? None.

"I ask people to name me any other black who has opened a business in the Hamptons. And I always get the same answer. P. Diddy and

(She can currently can be seen in select markets on TV One). She also, for the past twenty-two years, has had a well known restaurant in Manhattan in the theatre district with her name on the door. Twelve years ago, she and her husband opened a second B Smith's in Washington. Based on the success of these two and now the one in Sag Harbor founded ten years ago, they are expanding the chain to new

Russell Simmons. But they don't have businesses here. They have vacation homes here. There's NOBODY black who has a retail business here. And I'm sick of it. Blacks are invisible."

I mentioned there are blacks who have rug cleaning or commercial window washing businesses and landscape businesses and he said that is not what he is talking about. I did understand what he meant. I recall once, years ago, that a man from the Bahamas named Frank Hanna opened a business in the Hamptons. The white community effectively forced him out of town. And that included the local authorities. This was thirty five years ago. I didn't think that sort of thing went on anymore.

"People look at me as if I'm some kind of science project," Dan continued. "YOU own a restaurant in the Hamptons? You can't. A white person has to own a restaurant. Maybe you work there. Maybe if I was 23 and in the NFL it would be different. But I'm a black businessman. In the Hamptons, that is a different story."

"Tell me who is spreading these rumors if you can," I said.

"I really don't know. But I know who tells me they heard them."

He named them. Sandy, the secretary at Malloy Properties, Sandy. Nancy at the Sag Harbor Boat Dock. Tom and Vinnie, the bartenders, and the manager Paul, at the American Hotel in Sag Harbor. After we talked, I called all these people up. Indeed, they all confirmed that they heard these rumors. But nobody knew where they had begun.

One extraordinary comment reportedly was made about Dan and Barbara by the Mayor of Sag Harbor. It was at a Board of Directors Meeting at Bay Street. The news had come down around three months ago that the big gas ball in back of the Post Office was going to be removed. (Now it has.) A board member of the Bay Street Theatre, which is located next to B Smith's on the wharf, wondered if it were possible for the theatre to move to the site vacated by the gas ball. Perhaps they could build a whole new theatre. B Smith's was mentioned.

"You guys should stay clear of Gasby," the Mayor reportedly said, "or you'll be collateral damage."

(In defense of the Mayor, it should be said that the Mayor and the Village have been in court with B Smith's. The Village had tried to enforce a new law in that town regulating the number of seats that could be had in a restaurant, this law now changed to include the seating outdoors on a deck. Since most of the seats at B Smith's are out on the deck overlooking the water, this would drastically reduce the number of seats there and so Gasby and his wife had gone to court. They won. And the new law was thrown out. So his comment may have been about that. But it was still uncalled for.)

"You know, this place had been a bar before we bought it and turned it into a restaurant ten years ago," Gasby said. "In those ten years we have never, in all those years, had a fight, or a drug bust or even had the police come by to say we were playing music too loud. We have been good citizens. And we got a bad law thrown out."

Both Dan and Barbara are quite upset about what has been said about them and their restaurant. They were upset enough to call me up about it.

I mentioned that Jews in America, who have not suffered anywhere near as much prejudice as blacks in America, have nevertheless formed a very active group called the Anti-Defamation League. Whenever there is an anti-semitic comment made in the public arena, they shine a spotlight on it. So and so said it and here is what they said. It's a highly effective way to target bigots. They just melt away. The blacks should have a similar organization. Perhaps this situation will result in the formation of such a group.

I hope it does.

I Did What?

Epidemic of Zombies Wanders About After Taking a Little White Pill

By Dan Rattiner

"I do not remember getting up in the middle of the night, I do not remember driving off, being in an accident, or talking to the police. I can't live my life like this."

— Senator Patrick Kennedy of Rhode Island, after he announced he was entering a rehab for prescription drugs.

I just don't know where the time went. Same thing, every day. I have such a humdrum life. The time just seems to fly by. And I hardly remember any of it.

If this sounds familiar to you, and if you and everybody you know and even strangers in the supermarket seem to be just going through the motions of their day, zombie like, I have news. It's true. At a meeting of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences in Chicago last week, alarming evidence appeared woozy. Quite the contrary. They are, by all reasonable judgement, very alert. Alert and unconscious, and mobile enough to get into a car and crash into things. Zombies. Who then don't recall anything.

Presenting some of the cases of Ambien induced accidents to the Academy was Laura J. Liddicoat, a forensic toxicology supervisor at a state-run lab in Wisconsin. She had some stories. A man named Dwayne Cribb of Rock and charged with leaving the scene of an accident.

In Decatur, Georgia, a man was arrested for driving on the wrong side of the road at 1 a.m. When asked about it by the police officer who had pulled him over, he denied he had done it. Later, he said he didn't remember anything after taking two Ambiens and turning on David Letterman. That had been two hours earlier.

The presentation by Ms. Liddicoat sparked a whole range of stories from the many participants at this conference, almost none involving the police or accidents, but all involving Ambien. In a hospital in Dallas, a man given Ambien to help him sleep after a hip surgery was visited by a nurse who noticed some commotion in the room. The man said he was getting dressed to go to church. The next night, he went out into

was presented that the popular sleep drug Ambien is now showing up as a factor in a large number of auto accidents. At the present time, only 12 of the 50 states even look for Ambien in the blood when testing people at auto accidents. But in these twelve states, Ambien is now among the top ten drugs most identified. And it is not that the people who are involved with Ambien and accidents

Hill, South Carolina, who works as a parole officer, took Ambien and went to bed, but woke up in jail. He was found to have been out driving at 3 a.m., and smashing into a parked van and then backing up and going off to crash into a tree. When the police arrived, he seemed unaware that anything had happened, got back into his car and drove away yet again. He was pulled over a second time the hall and, apparently thinking he was in the bathroom, peed on the floor. They stopped the Ambien. The odd behavior stopped.

In St. Paul, Minnesota, another participant told a story of a patient who lives alone that took two Ambien before going to bed. The next morning, the patient found somebody had gone to the supermarket and bought all sorts of groceries, which were now in his refrigerator. Curious as to how the groceries got there, he found the receipt and with it drove down to the supermarket to ask if anybody remembered who had been there and when. The time and date were printed on the receipt, they showed him. It had been during the night. And it had been him.

People are apparently walking around as Ambien zombies, functioning quite well, thank you, in alarming numbers. And nobody really knows about them unless they either find out themselves – as in the above cases – or come to the attention of the police.

Readers will recall that in February, here on Long Island, a motorist at Exit 52 on the Long Island Expressway called the police to say that a man in a white van had passed her who, she thought, was clearly asleep at the wheel. She could see him in her rear view mirror and he had his eyes closed. Police caught up with him at exit 56 and pulled him over. His name was Stephen Nielsen and he had no recollection of any of it. They gave him a ticket, not for speeding, but for driving “recklessly.”

So how much of our lives are we living while unconscious on Ambien? It wouldn't surprise me if it were a lot. And it wouldn't surprise me if many of you readers have your own Ambien stories. I know I have mine.

Back in 2000, when Ambien first appeared on the market, my girlfriend and I both took a pill before retiring for the night. This was the first time either of us had taken this drug. I woke at 3 a.m. to find her gone. But I could smell breakfast. She was downstairs, apparently cooking eggs and bacon on the stove from what my nose told me. So I went down and asked her what she was doing and she said cooking breakfast, and I told her the time, which seemed to surprise her a little – it was quite dark out – and then I accompanied her back upstairs. Returning downstairs to clean up, I looked at the pans and dishes on the stove and.....that was the last I remember.

When I woke up I was on the carpeted stairs that go up from the kitchen to the bedroom. It was 9 in the morning. I had slept wonderfully there. My dog was licking my face. Time to get up.

That was the first and last time I took one of those pills.

I think we are at the beginning of an epidemic. I think that very clearly Ambien works. It puts you out. And I wonder if, as time has gone by, people are now taking more and more Ambien and larger and larger doses as they have become more confident with it.

It occurred to me that at the time the government put this drug through its paces in the lab to see whether it could be approved or not, they tested first to see if it could do what it said it would. There were patients. They took Ambien. Then they went to bed and fell right to sleep. It worked. Now, the government looked to see if there were any side effects, such as nausea, rashes, headache or blurred vision. Nope. What a miracle drug. So then they left to run off and write the report, paying only passing notice to what happened next, which was that all the patients got up, got dressed silently, signed out of the lab and drove off, apparently in a very calm and clear state of mind. Nothing wrong with that.

A spokesperson for Sanofi-Aventis, the maker of the drug, said there are very clear warnings about not using it with alcohol and that it could cause sleepingwalking or hallucinations.

“People should be aware of that,” he said. That ought to do it.

totals more than 50,000. Meanwhile, the towns are wrestling over how to provide housing for the less fortunate.

On the day that Ciopasiu was arrested, I read where the former Islip Town Supervisor here received word of the sentence he would have to serve for his crimes. Peter J. McGowan had stolen all sorts of public tax money from the public treasury, had been convicted of accepting bribes, had received checks from people to be applied to political campaigns and then put the money into his own account. He did this for years and freely admitted it. His sentence was 90 days in jail. And those following the trial said that was fair. A good outcome.

There's been a long history of big phonies blending in at fundraisers and parties, enjoying the champagne and food. The media has gotten involved too. Two summers ago, a reporter for New York Magazine played a round of golf at the Maidstone Club, planning, if confronted, to mention the names of other members, who he would claim had invited him. The names were freely available in the list of club members. But the occasion never came up. I think he shot a 94.

I wonder if I ever ran into Sam Ciopaslu at any of the parties I attended last summer. I remember one man in his thirties who told me he was a guest of a summer resident in town for the month from Roumania. He sort of looks like Ciopaslu, to judge by his picture being handed around by the police, but to tell you the truth I really didn't notice him that closely. He was focused more on the shrimp cocktail at the time. I moved on.

What is to be done with Sam Ciopaslu? If we do nothing or very little, he'll be back here soon enough. He really likes the place. We can't deport him. He's here legally. The only alternative it seems to me, is to buy him a small cottage and a Porsche. He could then be here all summer, going on house tours, attending art openings, enjoying lectures and cocktail parties and fundraisers. Seems to be a well mannered fellow, neaten up the homes he resides in, maybe a bit too quick on the shrimps. If he plays his cards right, wears a signature bandana around his neck for example and calls himself "the Phantom," he could even gain a reputation as a sort of oddball personality.

"We had 'The Phantom' over on Sunday afternoon. Uninvited of course. We chatted awhile and told him he was welcome to use the pool. Nice fellow. But then he left." •

GREAT DISASTERS OF THE HAMPTONS....

No Elephants

Floods, Famines, Earthquakes, Stampedes, Fail to Come Here

By Dan Rattiner

HORRIBLE DISASTERS THAT HAVE NOT HAPPENED HERE IN THE HAMPTONS IN A LONG TIME

* * *

20,000 years ago, the second ice age brought a huge glacier to the Hamptons. When it melted, it left tons and tons of rock, dirt and mud here creating the South Fork. 5,000 years before that, the first ice age dumped tons and tons of rock, dirt and mud here to create the North Fork. There's been nothing like this since. We're due.

Herds of stampeding elephants have not swept through the Hamptons since at least before the white men came here. The record is not clear about what happened before that. But when elephants do sweep through, you can bet it will be terrible.

In 1992, a big wind that was originally thought to be a tornado, swept through Bridgehampton and knocked down trees on Main Street and destroyed an outdoor corrugated metal building that was attached to Thayer's Hardware Store. The National Weather Service later declared that it had not been a tornado, but just a sudden, strong wind. Had it been a tornado, it would have caused millions of dollars in damage and killed hundreds of people. But it wasn't.

There has never been a giant Tsunami in the Atlantic Ocean, but as we all know there was a terrible one in the Indian Ocean in 2005. Off the coast of Africa in the Atlantic Ocean, however, there is a series of islands called the Canaries. One of them, Hierro, has its western side precariously poised to slide into the sea. When it does, there will be a Tsunami of biblical proportions created, and it could surge along and possibly hit the Hamptons really bad.

Huge plagues of locusts blotting out the sky, eating all the leaves off the trees, terrifying the animals and invading grocery stores to eat up

THE PRINCE AND THE PRINCE, TRAVELING ABROAD

By Dan Rattiner

There are 55 safari camps on the plains of Botswana, which is just about all the westernized life there is on the vast plains of a country that is the size of Texas. They each consist of up to eight cabins which hold a maximum of sixteen guests, and then no more. The government has decreed that to preserve the abundant wildlife that lives on these plains, that shall be all the population that there will be.

Good food and drink and other sorts of beautiful things are there. There is art work, flat bottomed boats. Lanterns and kitchenware are flown into these camps from a small town called Maun in the center of the plains. Other than that, they are pretty primitive. But staff generally outnumbers the guests. And the service is impeccable.

Quite a number of world leaders visit the safari camps in Botswana, for the express purpose of going out on game drives to see the animals. Over lunch one afternoon at Kwara Camp, the camp manager, Nigel, told us about a visit from Prince Harry, Queen Elizabeth's grandson to Kwen Camp.

"Since the manager's name there is Harry and his is too, it was decided that for the duration of the visit, he should be known as Harry and the manager should be known as Kalahari Harry."

The decision was made by Prince Harry after consultation with his security people, which consisted of one man with a pistol.

Somebody at the table asked if there were any special arrangements made for the Prince.

"Not really," he said. "They went out on game drives. He photographed the lions and giraffes. His security man accompanied him. They lived in the tents like everybody else. There was no special treatment. It was a pleasure having him, and his bodyguard as well, to tell you the truth," Kalahari Harry told me.

This contrasted mightily with the visit of Prince Fahd Bin Abdul Aziz of Saudi Arabia who visited Kwenā last year. We heard about it from a guide who was taking us out to the airport at Kwara.

"The prince came with an entourage. And with a whole staff to attend both to his personal needs and to attend to his business obligations. One tent was taken over by the computer people, who had a generator, computers with Internet, television and telephone and all the other high tech stuff. The Prince had his own staff of twenty-five. There were fourteen armed security people with rifles, who spread out surrounding the camp for the duration in shifts. He had a masseuse, a cook, a dietician, a decorator. Also some of his family members, and a few friends of family. His daughter had two friends from college who were there."

"A decorator?"

"They completely redecorated the tent that the Prince stayed in."

"What about the other guests?"

"There weren't any. He booked the whole camp, for two weeks. Also Little Kwenā for the same two weeks. But the prince was there only six days."

"No. His people came out a week ahead to set things up for him."

"Did they at least go out on game drives?"

"Yes they did. All of them. They had five vehicles, and Little Kwenā had another three. They had taken that camp for two weeks, too. If we came upon a lion, all the security would fan out in a circle around the prince, their rifles cocked and ready. The first lion they came upon was sleeping under a tree. The Prince said they should wake him up. He wanted to see him hunting. They had to explain they couldn't just do that. If they tried, he wouldn't like it and if he didn't like it, they guaranteed the prince he wouldn't like it either.

"They were able to take him very quickly to see all the game. There was no just driving along looking for game. That was because they had not only our five Land Rovers and guides out, but they had also the other three from Little Kwenā. They were all hooked up on the CB radios, so if they'd come upon a cheetah or some elephants, the others would learn it right away and race the Prince over. He liked that."

The contrast between the visits of these two princes put me in mind of the contrast between what is called in our part of the world "Old Money," and "New Money." Old Money people rough it. They started coming out to the Hamptons in the nineteenth century and they were wealthy beyond anyone's all the available foodstuffs, have never come to the Hamptons.

The two biggest storms ever to hit the Hamptons were the Blizzard of 1888 and the Hurricane of 1938. If you do the math, you can see that we should have had another big storm in 1998. But we didn't. So now we are way overdue.

Nothing has ever risen hundreds of feet out of the sea, waddled ashore and destroyed cities and towns in the Hamptons. This could happen at any time.

No earthquake has ever swallowed up a town in the Hamptons. As a matter of fact, there has never been an earthquake in the Hamptons large enough to even make a crack in the earth. How much longer can the Hamptons hold out?

In 1996, we had what has been called the Great Sunrise Fire. It burned for days in the scrub pine section of Westhampton. A home was lost. 8,000 acres were consumed, although it was later said this was just a natural occurrence to clear the underbrush, something that happens or should happen every twenty years. But what if the wind were blowing the other way? We were lucky that time.

Awful

White Supremacist, Age 15, Terrorizes East Hampton Latino Students

By Joan Zandell

On Friday, May 5th, a fifteen-year-old East Hampton High School student of Caucasian descent was arrested in connection with a racial incident that took place on the evening of April 29th, 2006, when an East Hampton High School student who is a self-proclaimed skinhead, in tandem with two fellow classmates who share his beliefs, invited three young members of the Latino community to what was purported to be a party at his home.

According to Chief of Police Todd H. Sarris, "The leader of the group directed them all to a shed in the back of his parent's property, and offered them alcohol. Soon after, he flew into a rage, screaming racial epithets against Jews, Blacks and Hispanics. He then grabbed a machete and held it against the throat of one of the Latino teens, but the young man managed to get away. The leader then grabbed a chain saw and chased a second Latino teen across the property for a great distance, while the third Latino teen escaped."

All during this time, the two Caucasian classmates who had lured the Latino students to the shed claim to have only watched. According to Chief Sarris, it is believed that one of them said, "This is what is going to happen to you."

According to Scott Farina, the Principal of East Hampton High School, the White Supremacist student leader "had a website where he posted his beliefs." The website is myspace.com, a site known as a place with easy access where teens feel free to communicate, and which is notorious for child molesters posing as children wanting to lure potential victims.

As of Thursday afternoon, May 4th, the skinhead leader had posted that he was "a defender of the Reich" and was "The Heart of Hatred." According to Mr. Farina, "The website merely provides space where anyone can portray their points of view."

On Friday, May 5th, the East Hampton Town Police having obtained a search warrant, found the machete and chainsaw in the shed, and arrested the young man. According to Chief Sarris, "He was sent to family court and is presently incarcerated somewhere on the western end of Long Island."

Over the weekend, rumors about the chain saw incident flew throughout the Hamptons. The website was rife with gossip of shootings to come. Inciting the greatest fear was the buzz that the student leader would return to East Hampton High School during the sixth period on Monday, and wreak a Columbine-like retribution upon the school. Messages on the website encouraged white parents to keep their children at home.

By Monday morning, May 8th, as the sun rose in a cloudless Spring sky, illuminating freshly sprung leaves and mowed lawns across the Hamptons, tension and fear permeated a community known for its tranquility. According to Principal Farina, "None of the rumors had any validity, but we decided to increase the police presence to make the students feel safe, not because we felt there was an imminent threat."

This kind of racial tension, however, is not something that arises overnight. Principal Farina said, "Since I've been out here for the last three years, we've been dealing with racial issues utilizing community resources, schools, everyone is involved. It is true he had a website of his beliefs. We conducted a study to determine gang activity and we felt that there was no reason for alarm. We've been sensitive to the signs."

By Monday afternoon, a meeting of all parents and teachers was announced at the High School. Also present would be a translator for the Spanish speaking families. By 4 p.m., outside the school there was not a square inch of space that did not contain a parked car. Between 300-400 people attended, including reporters from WABC-TV, and WCBS-TV in New York City. Chief Sarris was there to address the parents. Regardless of ethnic background, parents unilaterally expressed concern over future incidents, stressing that East Hampton is a community with deep racial divisions and no solutions in sight.

As a result of the meeting, "We are forming a parent group and are soliciting input," said Principal Farina. "We are going to continue the school year and it is our intention to make people feel safe. We have a school resource officer and if there is a need for an increase in police presence, we can make that happen."

One of the three Latino teenagers was a graduate of East Hampton High School, another participates in the BOCES program, while the third still attends East Hampton High School. "All three have been offered counseling, but for the moment, they are in shock," said Principal Farina. Although one of the three is nineteen years old, the witness' name is not being released by police.

Meanwhile, the perpetrator will be tried as a juvenile, and for that reason, his name will not be released in these pages. "He may be put on probation, he may be incarcerated," said Chief Sarris, "The trial date is not yet known, but I believe it will take place toward the latter part of next week."

WHITE HITS LATINO WITH CAR IN SOUTHAMPTON

By Dan Rattiner

Last Friday morning, a 51-year-old man named Robert Rossetti of Southampton appeared before a Southampton Town Court judge to plead not guilty to second-degree assault and aggravated harassment. He is charged with a hate crime for assaulting and then trying to run down what he thought was an Illegal Immigrant in front of the 7-11 in Southampton with his car. The man he was assaulting was an American citizen.

I recall that after 9/11, somebody in the Southwest shot and killed two people they thought were Muslim terrorists going to a mosque. They were, in fact, two residents of India, a country that is our friend, who were going to a mosque to practice the Sikh religion. They have nothing to do with Muslim terrorists.

What is the matter with the bigots of America, anyway? Can't they keep it straight?

In the present case, the alleged crime took place at 1 p.m. last Thursday. Robert Rossetti, who drives a taxicab, drove over to a group of Latinos standing in front of the 7-Eleven and, according to Jonathan Cedillo, 21, formerly of Inglewood, California and now of Riverhead, here is what happened, based on what he told the judge. Rossetti was present at the arraignment, of course.

"I was eating a hamburger. He came over and slapped it out of my hands while yelling racial slurs. He was cursing at me, telling me I'm an immigrant and to get out of the country. I told him, Dude, what are you talking about? And I thought — he's trying to provoke me. I'm not going to respond. I don't want to go to jail for hitting an old man. Then he tried to back his car into me."

The first time he backed up, according to the testimony, he missed. But the second time, he

review: mario cantone

By Annemarie Davin

This year, Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor celebrates fifteen years of unforgettable entertainment and performances. In honor of the anniversary, The Comedy Club at Bay Street this year presents "15 Comics For 15 Years" with some of the funniest names in comedy. Last Saturday night, Mario Cantone was the first to kick-off the series and if this is any indication of the laughs to come, get ready to laugh until it hurts!

Mario has an impressive list of credentials, but is most recognized for his role on HBO's "Sex and the City" as Charlotte's bitchy wedding planner and wisecracking confidant, Anthony Marentino. His facial expressions and delivery are so funny I wondered how many times they had to re-shoot a "Sex and the City" scene because someone couldn't stop laughing.

His live performance this past Saturday evening had no room for a second take, but he didn't need it because he nailed everything the first time around.

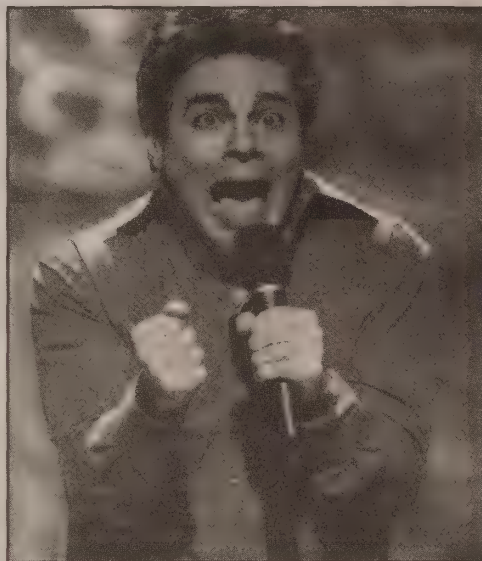

Mario has more energy than the Energizer Bunny. His comedy routine started when he asks the audience, "Can you believe they're remaking The Poseidon Adventure? How can you make The Poseidon Adventure without Shelley Winters?" and then he portrayed Ms. Winters on "Inside the Actors Studio" where she divulged "I fked all my leading men. Kirk Douglas, Tony Franciosa, Lauren Bacall, I fked them all."

It's just not a New York show without the mockery of New York cabbies. Cantone confessed that he likes taking the subway much more than getting into a taxi because the cabbies are a little bit scary these days, especially when you get in the cab and they're on the phone and you can't understand what they're saying so then you start thinking, "Ohhh, I know what you're doing.....you're plotting!"

Mario went on to a perform a series of hilarious impersonations like Cher and Tina Turner doing a duet of "Proud Mary" and added Kate Smith to make it a trio, followed by Elvis Presley and Ann-Margaret singing and dancing to "Viva Las Vegas." He flowed from one to the next, flawlessly. Then it was Michael Jackson's turn at center stage as Mario led us through the stages of his nose reconstruction, saying it had been altered so much that now he has a clitoris for a nose. "And Michael likes making up his own words," shouted Mario. "What the hell is 'sha-mon'? Do you know the actual lyrics say, 'c'mon', not 'sha-mon'? What does he say when he's having sex? 'I'm gonna shum?'"

In the second act he introduced us to the Cantone family and the zany Italian relatives that Mario grew up with. If you come from an Italian family, like I do, you'll find yourself thinking that there's someone in your family that parallels those in the Cantone clan. He described the house he grew up in and the holidays; his family, all 900 relatives, sitting on the couch looking like "a Scorsese casting call." His uncles would sit there with their "chunky, gold-dipped pinky rings that had powers like something out of Star Wars." Mario then made whishing sounds as he ran about the stage waving his pinky like a light saber.

His rendition of his scratchy-voiced, trash-talking sister, Camille, was my favorite. He let us in on Camille's views on Bill Clinton. "So he liked the BJs. He had a high-pressure job. I want my president to be relaxed. You can be sure no one's relaxing George Dubya," he said sitting on a stool with his legs crossed, pretending to blow smoke from a cigarette.

If you've never had the privilege of seeing Mario Cantone live, you have to catch him the next time around. This is the funniest show I've seen in a very long time. You can keep up with this Tony-nominated comedian by visiting his website www.mariocantone.com and can check out the summer line up at Bay Street Theatre by going to www.baystreet.org, but get your tickets fast because this show was sold out and I'm sure future shows will sell out, too.

⚡ BREAKING NEWS ⚡

Although in its infancy, Sagaponack Village has created its own coastal erosion district to help fight the growing problem of erosion at the ocean beaches in the village. This new tax district has already raised $250,000 for improvements and is petitioning for matching funds from Southampton Town and Suffolk County. They are hoping that Senator Schumer's request for funding from the state will also add to their cause. The committee, which is headed by Gary Ireland, Frank Germino, John White, Barbara Slifka, and Gordon McMahon, is also looking for the support of County Executive Steve Levy, who has expressed concerns about the beaches and the Suffolk County Groins.

Currently the committee is exploring a variety of preventative and restorative methods to sure up the coastline. They are discussing the need for a sand nourishment project while applying for permits to scrape the Sagaponack beaches to bolster the dunes. This would not occur until after August and involves removing the top few inches of sand from the beach and placing it at the base of the already existing dunes in order to re-enforce and protect them through the storm season.

The exact and full impact of the Sagaponack Erosion District has yet to be seen, but even in the early stage, their convictions seem to be strong as they work with members of the village, town, county, state to safeguard our beaches for years to come.

Soldier Ride

Wounded Vets Leave Montauk for California to Highlight the War

By David Lion Rattiner

I've got to be honest, it was an emotional experience seeing members of the Soldier Ride take off from the Montauk Lighthouse last Saturday. Soldier Ride is a group of cyclists that travel on bicycle across the country to raise awareness and money for wounded soldiers from the war in Iraq. So far they've raised more than $10 million. It all started two years ago, when Chris Carney, a local man from East Hampton, decided one day that he was going to get on his bicycle and go across the country. In the beginning it was just Chris who traveled across the country. But on this trip, almost eighty wounded soldiers joined him, along with thousands of supporters that donate money and cheer the group on along the way.

The ride has turned into a national organization, that includes, for the first time, corporate sponsors. One major sponsor is U-Haul, the truck renting company, who has agreed to put a large super graphic on the side of 200 of their trucks. The president of U-Haul Manhattan spoke to the crowd, honoring and praising the men and women involved in the project. The other main corporate sponsor, Cracker Barrel, has agreed to feed everyone that is participating in the Soldier Ride for free, as they travel along across the country.

About a hundred people woke up early Saturday morning to watch the beginning of the Soldier Ride take place. Among the people that were there was County Legislator Jay Schneiderman, who said, "Nothing is going to stop these guys. I look at them and just become so inspired. What they are doing is just amazing and I feel honored to be around them. The ride has done so much to bring attention to the issue, help the soldiers and even change policy in Washington D.C. These guys are real heroes and that's not a word I throw around lightly. Nothing is going to stop these guys."

It is difficult to put into words the emotions

UPCOMING: LIU SOUTHAMPTON'S LAST ALUMNI REUNION

By Alan-Michael Braveman

The concept of "College Reunions" conjures up a wide range of wild images in the minds of college alumni and sometimes fear and loathing in townspeople. Overage, overweight, overbearing alums gather to loudly tell tall tales in a local pub. Recent grads come back to roar down Main Street in an attempt to recapture their memories of "their old undergraduate days."

None of that is anticipated at this year's Southampton College Reunion. May 20th will see the last ever Southampton College Reunion on the grounds of Southampton

College. The reunion has been in the planning stages since last year and despite the forthcoming unalterable changes wrought by the sale of the campus to Stony Brook University, the reunion should be an enjoyable, memory-filled weekend that should bring some closure to the past year's events. It will be different than any other college reunion, as the college has been closed since last August. There are a few graduate students on campus but with all but two of the 43 buildings on campus shuttered and padlocked and no current undergraduate classes to attend, it will be a relatively quiet and retrospective affair.

The Reunion is comprised of a series of planned events: a boxed breakfast on Saturday morning at Chancellors Hall, a two hour boat ride on the Atlantis Explorer (out of Marine World in Riverhead), Winery Tours for those who get sea sick or would prefer to taste the local grape, a lazy faculty /alum Volleyball game, and finally, a cocktail party and dinner under a tent behind Chancellors Hall. Alumnus Doug Dwyer will again provide the music and help draw out the memories. There will be a new and unique event at this year's dinner. The last of the undergraduates who that you go through when you see some of the guys that are doing the Soldier Ride. Every single one of them has a very serious injury. I think that many of us forget what the word wounded actually means when it comes to war. It is important to remember that 30,000 of our soldiers have come back wounded and it is important to recognize how big a deal that is. Before I had the experience of covering Soldier Ride for this newspaper, I would hear the word wounded on television and think to myself, oh, well, that isn't a big deal. At least there are only three thousand that are dead, wounded just means that they are hurt.

But the wounded that were in my mind were not what I saw at the Montauk Lighthouse last Saturday morning. Wounded in my mind meant a broken arm or ankle. In reality, wounded is much more serious a word than that. It means that you have had a limb blown off, have had severe burns to your body, or have lost function on some part of your body to the point where you can no longer function as a soldier. It doesn't mean a cut on your arm that will heal in a couple of weeks. It doesn't mean that you broke your arm. Guys that break their arms heal up and head back into battle. A wounded soldier, however, is no longer fit for war for the rest of his or her life. Wounded means that something really went bad. Neil Duncan, from Minnesota is a good example of what wounded means. He is missing both of his legs above the knee, which means that he has to sit down on a special bicycle that he operates with his hands in order to participate in the ride. "I lost my legs from a road side bomb in Afghanistan. Not a very good day."

I asked him how he found out about Soldier Ride, to which he said, "Oh, everybody knows about it. All of the soldiers in the hospital know about it. We talk about the Soldier Ride all the time, it is really well known amongst us."

I left Neil alone so that he could rig up his bike and get ready for his three thousand-mile journey across the country. I couldn't help but overhear a conversation two other wounded soldiers were having about a friend from the war that they knew. One part of the conversation went like this: "Did you hear how he killed himself? So terrible, man, I just can't believe it."

I felt compelled to ask what they were talking about, "A lot of soldiers that come home wounded kill themselves because they have nothing left. It's just horrible, you wouldn't believe it."

Since its inception, Soldier Ride and the Wounded Warrior Project has raised this amazing sum of money, almost ten million dollars. The community of Montauk should be praised for being the first community to embrace and support Soldier Ride when it first began. Steve Nardizzi, the executive director of the Soldier Ride, made sure to thank the community, "This organization would not be what it is today if it wasn't for the community of Montauk and how well they embraced this cause. It feels so good to be back here. We owe this event today to Chris Carney, who is my friend and personal hero."

The group of cyclists lined up and signed their names on the side of a U-Haul truck, then took off down the road with the cheering crowd of children and adults, ranging from as young as five to grandparents, watched them pedal away. They have a long way to go, but the adventure will be worth the trip.

attended Southampton College, about 125 of them, who will graduate from CW Post this coming Sunday, will be inducted into the alumni association. This will be a seminal moment as there will be no further undergraduates to join the alumni association.

The unplanned events may include tours of the now-shuttered campus and tales and quiet tears as the various alums relive their glorious younger days. There will be lots of college yearbooks to page through along with copies of the college paper from all 43 years of the existence of Southampton College. The Southampton College Reunion will rock to the sounds of live music one last time, to help recall the glorious days of the Rascals, the Tru Blu, Playboy Bunnies, Murph the Surf, their fraternities and sororities, the athletic team victories, and Bob Dylan and Paul Simon in concert. Then it will be over.

The gathered alumni will have given a grand send off to their old home and help get it ready to welcome a new name, a new curriculum and a new faculty. Starting in September of '06 a new group of students will wander the halls and breathe fresh air and excitement into the campus. For the Southampton College alumni it should be exciting to realize that longevity and a future are in place, albeit under a new name, and that some of their dreams and traditions will live on. They can come back and glory in what was and what may be, as the front gates are once again unlocked and opened to welcome students and faculty to a wonderful, enchanted, magical place that breathes a desire for knowledge and learning into anyone who tarries on the campus.

That is the legacy the alumni should be most proud to leave to the incoming class of freshmen; the 43 years of amazing education and emotional shaping that were the hallmark of Southampton College. No matter what the future may hold, all of those students who attended Southampton College went on to make the world a little better place because of what they learned and because of a faculty who taught them the word "resilience."

Who's Here

By Julia Nasser

In the beginning, Mitchell Kriegman created the sloth. Contracts were signed. A great stage was painted blue and a rainforest spread across cyberspace. And so it was that a television series was created. On the last day, the animals were named: Snook, Smooch, Winslow, Burdette, Madge, Ick, Bob, Oko.

* * *

It was almost a year ago that blue-clad puppeteers gathered on a great blue stage in Wainscott to begin production of "It's a Big Big World," which aired last January on PBS Kids. This show, produced by Mitchell Kriegman, currently broadcasts 2700 times each week nationwide. Ratings are up 30% at PBS and soon the plush toys will hit the market, licensed by SONY. Parents, be prepared to line up at toy stores from coast to coast for talking turtles, mystic monkey figurines, huggable stuffed sloths and battery operated tree frogs.

Last month, I had a chance to sit down with the mastermind behind it all. When I ask Kriegman about the show, his career, his plans, he simply says he feels he has arrived. "I have managed to paint myself into a corner of my choosing." And that corner is Wainscott.

Kriegman's career is difficult to fit into one neatly crafted paragraph. He's done late night comedy, puppet shows for preschoolers and everything in between. In the early 1980s, he joined the team of "Saturday Night Live" as a performer, writer and filmmaker. He had a blast with performance art in the 80s, worked as a video artist, did stand up comedy, and even spent some time writing "sensitive man stories." His work has been in the Whitney Museum and The London Institute; his writing in The New Yorker, National Lampoon, Glamour and Harper's Bazaar. After writing for "Saturday Night Live," Kriegman shifted towards a younger demographic. He created the 90s hit series "Clarissa Explains It All," was head writer and developer of "Rugrats," "Doug" and "Ren and Stimpy," made feature-length film Elmo in Grouchland, revived America's favorite honey bear in "Book of Pooh" and won a handful of awards for "Bear in the Big Blue House." He patented a cutting edge technique called Shadowmation, an ever-evolving process that combines live puppets with virtual sets. Now he runs his own production company in Wainscott, has three kids and a heap of Emmys and Parents' Choice Awards, in some closet, I'm sure.

"There is so much more freedom when writing for kids. You can be much more original. Kids are ready to go there with you."

Upon meeting the man, this makes sense. "I'm not tied to the way things have been done

before," he says.

Anyone who knows his work sees the man has an uncanny ability to bring unexpected pieces together, to free associate. Take Shadowmation. In short, what we have here is the Dadaism of special effects: an ancient form of Japanese puppetry (morphed with the Czech Black Theater) thrown into 21st-century cyberspace.

If you visit the sound stage of Wainscott studios, you will be greeted by a gaggle of puppeteers in blue body suits. In this version of the ed world. The effect is immersion. Warm, highly expressive creatures inhabit this awe-inspiring expanse of jungle in jewel-like pigments. The cameras, hovering on giant cranes, soar in breathy flight.

As he speaks, I find myself asking him the same question over and over again.

"How the hell did you come up with that?"

He thinks for a moment, then says quietly, "It takes a leap."

Kriegman's career really took off with "Clarissa Explains It All," which aired in 1992. There were no shows written from the point of view of a girl at that time; conventional wisdom said boys would never watch it, that it would surely fail. How could a 44-year-old man write from the perspective of a 14-year-old girl? Conventional wisdom, as often seems the case, was incorrect.

For young viewers mired in the hell of pre-pubescence, that wonderful, wise-cracking 14-year-old Clarissa, with her candid monologues and funny clothes, was a sigh of relief — unaffected, cute and totally original. The show thrived for seven seasons.

Then there was "Bear in the Big Blue House." The world loved Bear — orange, formidable, seven feet tall and dancing the cha-cha-cha. (Bear made appearances on "The Rosie O'Donnell Show," "Live With Regis and Kathy Lee," and the "Today Show," among others.)

Kriegman moved out of the city after 9/11. "It was not the event but the reaction that drove me away. New York used to be a place of risk. It just closed off, became so claustrophobic. The very air was disturbing too."

He wanted to expand his company and raise his family out of the city, so Kriegman moved to Sagaponack and founded Wainscott studios, the state of the art facility that houses the show. This was about the time "It's a Big Big World" sprouted in the freewheeling Kriegman brain.

Why? Because the world was a tumultuous and scary place. "Kids see tsunamis, they watch wars. They need a positive way to understand. Everywhere looked dark and unfamiliar. The idea was simple. A way kids could grasp it all — a language to understand the world."

Set in a digitally-rendered rainforest, the series stars Snook — the oafish, benign (yet energized) sloth who dances to upbeat percussion and jingles with his buddies in the largest tree on earth.

"So why a sloth?" I ask him.

"Everyone is wound up, including me. I like the sloth because he is sort of wound down. Zen-like. In the moment."

He's broadening his production company in Wainscott's off-season, which he calls a free-wheeling space, and getting ready to do another season. "It's an exciting moment in the industry

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

What's That Song?

My daily goal last Sunday was to see the movie Mission Impossible 3, starring Tom Cruise. I don't care what you say about Tom Cruise, I honestly don't. I agree with you that he is a nut job. But you know what? I can't deny the fact that he is in a blockbuster film about a team of secret agents that go around the world doing impossible missions, blowing stuff up and killing bad guys in clever ways. I don't care if Tom Cruise one day decides that he is going to dye his skin permanently green and make up his own language. If he continues to play the role of Ethan Hunt, I'm watching his movies.

I was so pumped about seeing this movie and I was singing the theme song in my head all day. Well, at least what I thought was the theme song. I called my little sister Molly, a teenager, to express my excitement about the movie. She had already seen the movie and told me that it was awesome. Before seeing the movie, I needed to share with her the pumped-up-ness that I was feeling. I also wanted to sing her, well hum her, the theme song that everybody knows. I got on my cell phone.

"Hello?"

"Hey Mopper (Molly's nick name). I'm going to see Mission Impossible 3 tonight."

"Sweet."

"I know, right? I can't get the song out of my head. Da dum, da dum, da daaaaa dum, da na na, da na na."

"That's not the Mission Impossible theme, you idiot."

"It's not?"

"No, that was the theme to James Bond."

"Oh my God, dude, you're right. How does the theme to Mission Impossible go?"

There was silence. My sister was stuck. She couldn't think of the theme.

"Holy cow man. I can't think of how the song goes either. I got the James Bond song stuck in my head now."

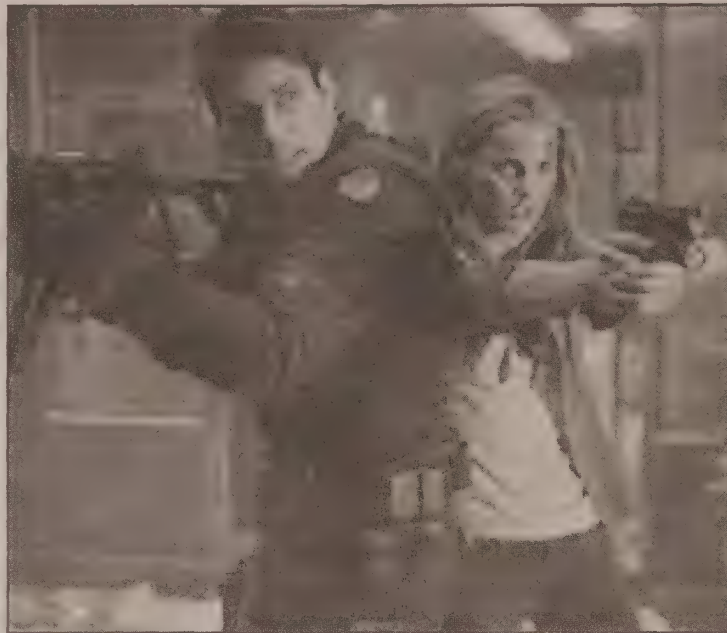

"Well, figure it out and call me back."

"I can't, I'm not near a computer right now."

"Well, then ask somebody and then call me back when you find out."

"All right."

I flipped off my cell phone and felt terrified.

I couldn't believe that I couldn't remember the theme to Mission Impossible 3. That song is my life's theme song. There have been countless occasions when I have been somewhere, felt kind of bored and then pretended to be Ethan Hunt saving the world. I might be in a bathroom at a hotel, or walking to and from the bar or inside a fancy Hamptons restaurant. Suddenly, in my mind, I am Ethan Hunt, super secret agent, saving the world. And then I hum the theme until I bump into somebody that I know and fall out of character.

I was on Main Street in East Hampton getting some coffee when frustration came over me. I had to know the theme to this stupid movie. It was my mission, I was choosing to accept it. Like an idiot, I began asking people in the middle of the street if they knew how it went. I can't imagine what these people must have thought about me. I tried to stop them from judging me by introducing myself casually: "Excuse me, sir. Listen, this is going to sound weird, but I'm not crazy. It's just that I'm going nuts trying to figure out the theme to Mission Impossible. I'm confusing it with James Bond. Do you have any idea how the song goes?"

"Are you serious?"

"No seriously, I know this is dumb. But if you know it, just hum it."

"Well I do know it, but I'm not going to sing

it for you here."

This son of a.....Okay keep cool. "Just hum it. Nobody will be able to hear you."

"I'm not going to hum the theme to Mission Impossible, okay?"

"Doesn't it go like dum dum da dum, da dum dum?"

"No that's James Bond. Okay well I must be going now."

What is the big deal? I was angry with this guy all of the sudden. He must have been in one of those situations where he couldn't remember something simple like this and was forced to the lowest form of human behavior, which is asking somebody in the street for an answer. I saw him get into his Audi; I made a mental note. Jerks drive Audis.

If you have an Audi, you are not a jerk. But other people, who don't read this column, they are a bunch of jerks.

I asked another person in the street, this time a woman who looked to be in her thirties. She gave me a look that said, "Get the hell away from me, you psycho."

I was wishing I was a teenager so that I looked cute when I asked somebody this question. After all, a grown man asking somebody the theme to Mission Impossible is a little ridiculous, I guess. I needed to get clever. What would Ethan Hunt do?

I walked across the street to the movie theater and hung outside the doors, waiting for people to come out. There was a one o'clock show, and it was about two-thirty, so, by my calculations, soon some people will come out the door that just saw the movie. I waited for almost twenty minutes. There was no one. But then, I saw some teenagers coming out of the theater. This was my only chance. "Hey guys, did you just see Mission Impossible 3?"

"Yeah, we all saw it," said a thirteen-year-old boy wearing a surfing t-shirt.

"Is it awesome?"

"Oh man, it is so good. You should see it."

"How does the theme song go again?"

"You don't know it?"

"I forgot it. It's killing me."

"I hate it when that happens."

"So do you know it?"

"For five bucks."

"Five bucks?"

"Yeah, five bucks and I'll tell you the theme."

"All right, all right, five bucks. Here it is." I couldn't believe I was doing this.

"Sweet. Okay, it goes like this: Dum dum da dum, da dum dum."

"Give me my five bucks back. That is the theme to James Bond."

"Oh, wait a second, you're right. Hang on, hang on. Okay, wait a second. Okay, here it is, I got it. It starts off with a long note that, like, flutters, then goes, dent dent da na dent dent da na dent dent da na dent dent da na, do noo noo, do noo noo, do noo noo, do noo."

"Yes, dude! That's the song! Oh, what a relief, you just made my day. Thanks a lot."

"Any time man."

These kids are getting smarter and smarter every day.

BRENT LYNCH, 66

By Dan Rattiner

J. Brent Lynch of Quogue passed away last week from lung cancer at the age of 66. A family man, he is survived by his wife of 38 years, the former Jered Ann McAllister, and his four children, his daughter Stephanie Douglass of New York City, and his three sons, Geoffrey, Andrew and Peter, all also of Quogue. He is also survived by his brother Frank, a stepsister Sandy Vandy, and three granddaughters.

Brent was a handsome, winsome man of impeccable manners and integrity, who came to buy the fledgling Hampton Jitney motor coach company from its founder Jim Davidson in 1988. At the time, the Jitney was just ten years old. Prior to that time, Brent, born in New York City and raised in Tarrytown, majored in engineering at the University of Pennsylvania where he received his undergraduate degree, and then went on to get a law degree from the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

Brent spent his whole career involved in the transportation business. After obtaining his law degree, he went to work for General Motors, where his father was a senior executive for that company's European operations. Several years later, he married Jered Ann, known to friends as "Missy" and went to work for her family's business, which was the McAllister Tugboat company in New York harbor. Among the assets of the McAllister family was the Cross Sound Ferry Company, which takes passengers and their cars between Orient Point and New London, Connecticut. In 1973, Brent and a partner purchased this service and moved out east. Fifteen years later, he sold his share of the company and with that money purchased the Hampton Jitney business from Mr. Davidson.

During his years at the Hampton Jitney, Brent put in many new services. He added a winter run to Florida so that residents of the Hamptons could go to their homes in Palm Beach and other destinations and bring their cars with them. He upgraded the passenger bus service to Manhattan, added stops on some of the buses to include stops on the West Side. He ordered new, more luxurious motor coaches and introduced the Ambassador Class Service. With his wife in charge, he renovated, upgraded and redefined the Omni Health and Racquet Club, which shares the building with the Hampton Jitney and which the company owns. He began special Broadway Show trips and Holiday shopping trips to New York City, and trips to Boston and Foxwoods from the Hamptons. He arranged for a wireless Internet access service aboard the motor coach trips. And he arranged to open a lunch emporium in the Omni, now the Janet O'Brien Café, along with several other retail stores and services. Most recently, he arranged, with his son Geoffrey now running the firm, for the purchase of the Sunrise Bus Service connecting Manhattan to the North Fork.

In 1996, Brent was seriously injured when some building equipment fell on him while he supervised a renovation job at the Omni building in Southampton. Hospitalized, it seemed for a while he might not survive, but he did. How he handled his disabilities — he lost a leg, most of his hearing and walked with crutches after that accident — was an inspiration to everyone who knew him. He solved his accident problems by simply ignoring them. He never complained. I recall him at a boat christening party in 2002 in Shinnecock Harbor. His wife's family, still in ownership of McAllister Tugboat in Manhattan, had gotten a new tug and wanted to name it after Brent's wife. Brent announced that he would host the christening not far from his home in Quogue at the commercial dock in Shinnecock just inside the channel in Hampton Bays, and invite hundreds of guests. I was one of them.

It was a magnificent summer day. Brent, without help, negotiated his way across the gangplank to the newly painted ship "Missy McAllister" and spoke for fifteen minutes about his love for her, about how she deserved to have a boat named after her, and what a wonderful life he led with her and his family. He then came down to the dock the way he had come up, and mingled with the crowd, which outdoors there on the pier enjoyed champagne and hors d'oeuvres, shrimps and scallops and chicken on a skewer served by uniformed waiters and also a bagpipes concert. After that, a close knit group of his friends, including this writer, took a ride on the new ferry out through the channel and back.

I will miss Brent Lynch. He was a man of dignity and good cheer. It never varied. He was a shining star in the Universe of the Hamptons.

got him, hitting him in the right knee. Cedillo was taken to Southampton Hospital by friends where it was found he was suffering muscle and tissue damage, but no broken bones. They treated him and put him in a brace and gave him crutches and released him.

Douglas Borroughs, a Southampton Attorney, represented the injured man in court. "He approached a person who was born here and here all his life," he said. "It shouldn't matter if they're illegal or not. We're all human beings."

Cedillo is of Mexican-American and American Indian Heritage. He was born and raised in Southern California and moved to Riverhead to take a job as a yacht detailer at one of the local marinas. He says he doesn't plan to sue. The judge granted him an order of protection against Rossetti.

It is not known what Robert Rossetti's heritage is. But it is a good bet that though he might have been born here, his parents or grandparents migrated here, just as Cedillo's did. • wildest dreams, but they lived in places that had no heat or hot water and the most primitive of furniture. Oddly, the Old Money people were largely English. They were the Fords, the Carnegies, the Morgans and the Vanderbilts and those who came out to the Hamptons thought of it as a sort of taking of the healthy air. And they lived simply and frugally.

The "New Money" people are all those, largely of backgrounds that were considered beneath those of the "Old Money" classes a generation before, and they travel as the Saudi did to Kwen.

I recall that in East Hampton, there was a big debate about what to do about animals on the runways here. It was decided to fence the whole place in, and they did, with fences twelve feet high, too high for even the mightiest deer to leap over.

We might have opted for animal guides with Land Rovers. But I guess the fences, though ugly, were cheaper. Oh well.

Incidentally, though most of the "Old Money" hotels have either been torn down or burned down – I recall the great fire that took the Sea Spray Inn in East Hampton about twenty five years ago – one or two still stand and if you want to see what one was like, you ought to consider renting a room in the old section of the Hunting Inn on Main Street in East Hampton. Ceilings are low, the rooms are about eight by ten feet, the walls are thin. You'll love it. Maybe. •

16 MORE DAYS UNTIL THE DAN'S PAPERS POTATOHAMPTON

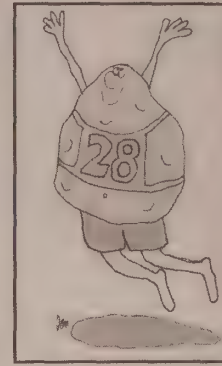

By Dan Rattiner

Saturday morning, May 28, promptly at 9 a.m., a gun will sound on Ocean Road in Bridgehampton and hundreds of runners will be off on the annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton 5k Minithon through the potato fields of Bridgehampton. There are ocean views along the route. The race passes horse farms, farm stands, potato farms, large mansions, even an old New England windmill.

Everyone is welcome. You can either participate in the event or come down to the start/finish line and as a spectator just root for those that do. We have trophies for the winning man and woman overall, 150 gift certificates for the two winners overall, a category for kids 13-19, for ages 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, 60-69, 70-79 and 80+. And we also have prizes for the winners, gift certificates, in both men's and women's categories in every age group, twenty in all, and trophies for every category too. We also have second and third place ribbons in all categories. And everybody who enters and completes the course gets a CERTIFICATE OF COMPLETION suitable for framing. And the first 400 entries get free t-shirts.

You will find the start/finish line about three hundred yards down Ocean Road to the south of the Bridgehampton monument. You can go to the Bridgehampton Militia Park on Ocean Road just behind One Ocean Restaurant for stretching and warm up before the race beginning at 7 a.m., and you can also register for the race if you have not already done so at that location. Preregistration can be done on Friday of this week the day before the race at either the World Gym in Hampton Bays or the Omni Health and Racquet Club in Southampton or at Gubbins Running Ahead East in East Hampton or at Dan's Papers in Bridgehampton until 5 pm that day. You can also print out a registration form on line at Danspapers.com, fill it out and fax it to us at 631-537-3330 with a check for the entry fee, $25 made out to FACT, the charity we raise money for. FACT is the Foundation for the Advancement of Cardiac Therapies, based at Columbia University Hospital in Manhattan. Money raised will also be donated to the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center.

The race is great fun. This is the 28th annual renewal of this event, so it is about as old as the New York Marathon, and it certainly is the oldest run on the east end.

The presentation and announcement of the winners will take place in the tent at the the Bridgehampton Militia Park at 10:30. The times of all the winners will be posted, and will stay posted in the entrance lobby at Dan's Papers beginning on Monday morning, remaining up for the entire week. Enjoy the race.

We would very much like to thank numerous organizations for their efforts and cooperation in making the race a success. Thank you Southampton Town Recreation Department, Bridgehampton Fire Department, Bridgehampton Ambulance, and Southampton Town Police for all your help. We could not do this event without you.

where it's all getting faster and better, an always-evolving process. Technology is opening up."

But he doesn't seem overly concerned with the list of accomplishments. He doesn't mention the awards. Instead he tells a story about some terrible teacher he had at Bennington College, who told him he was an awful writer. And then thinking back on that guy when he got published in the New Yorker.

Kriegman loves the irreverent: Bugs Bunny. The eccentrics: Faulkner. Garcia Marquez. And the even more eccentric Italian writers. His dream project is to make a feature out of Italo Calvino's Barron in the Trees.

Once someone told him that his writing sounded as if it had been translated from another language. To me this seems a great compliment and the idea keeps coming back to me.

This might be Kriegman's great gift — to think in another language.

It's not thinking outside the box. There is no box.

adults develop cardiovascular disease

Evaluate your risk at East End Cardiology.

East End Cardiology (EEC) is a local group of board-certified cardiologists who specialize in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular disease.

You can help protect yourself through early detection and treatment. Now there's a way to look into your heart. Literally. It's called the EEC Scan64SM.

The EEC Scan64SM is a brand-new, non-invasive, diagnostic tool that uses a 64-slice CT system to create a three-dimensional image of your heart. And East End Cardiology is proud to be the first in Suffolk County to offer this new technology.

The EEC Scan64SM

- Is quick, painless, and non-invasive
- Is performed in an open scan environment
- Delivers a level of detail not previously possible without using a more invasive procedure, such as cardiac catheterization.
- Detects heart disease before symptoms occur.

The EEC Scan64SM will evaluate your risk of cardiovascular disease. For more information or to make an appointment, call us today at 866-4SCAN64 (866-472-2664).

"AWAKE AND SING" OPENING NIGHT

Lincoln Center is celebrating the centenary of renowned playwright Clifford Odets with a solid revival of his most famous play "Awake and Sing" which opened on Broadway at the Belasco Theatre, the very same theatre where the classic play premiered in 1935. The evening brought out many of theatre's elite with high hopes that some of the magic from the brilliant 1935 original directed by the master Harold Clurman (who founded the Group Theatre with Lee Strasberg in 1931) might rub off. Stella Adler, the legendary actress/teacher, as well as her famous father Luther Adler and Sandford Meissner were featured in the outstanding cast that received over 16 curtain calls on opening night, bringing Odets stardom and making the Group Theatre the leader in American Drama..

Potato Barn Burns, But History Remains

A Historical Building Burned Down Last Week, Here Is Its Story

By R.B. Stuart

Last Monday the century old potato barn on Depot Lane in Cutchogue caught fire and burned to the ground, but it didn't take the memories of the locals with it.

The barn was purchased in 1995 by Shulman Produce Shippers from an I. M. Young subsidiary called Lebanon Chemicals. The large barn was built in 1900 by the building firm Goldsmith and Tuthill, who were a respected trio of two brothers, Jeremiah G. Tuthill, Ira B. Tuthill and Orrin F. Goldsmith. They established the firm in 1842.

Along with being builders they were ship owners who brought coal and produce to New York City from their wharf in New Suffolk. Ira Tuthill gave the then new railroad company land for the depot in Cutchogue where trains could pull up directly beside the barn, allowing Tuthill to bring the distant markets of New York and Brooklyn much nearer in time to the North Fork of Long Island.

The shingled structure with four covered bays parallel to the railroad tracks was part of the rural landscape on Depot Lane. At that time, they sold railroad siding and produce in the store. "It was considered a landmark for people in Cutchogue. Over the last fifty years at one time or another every farmer in the North Fork took their potatoes there," remarked Diane Shulman, co-owner of Shulman Produce Shippers, a family owned company founded by her father Jerry in 1954. Shulman recalled an underground scale there used to weigh the trucks. The packing shed, as they referred to it, was a place used to store potatoes in the early years. Upstairs there were bins that would hold up to 700,000 pounds of potatoes. Later the upstairs became a local hang out and card room, and while the Shulmans owned it, the upstairs was used for the storage of papers and files.

In 1942 a local newspaper, The North Fork Life, commemorated the firm on their 100th anniversary, which was saluted as "A red blooded American firm, typical of the American system of free enterprise." In their long history as builders, shippers and store-owners, thirty years after creating the firm they had lost one of their New Suffolk stores to a fire. Most of their stock going up in flames. Then in 1908 their Young's Avenue branch lumber yard also went up in flames the second serious fire in the firms history, which would cause them even greater loss.

Years later, the barn would be bought by I. M. Young, who used it as a potato shed. And, local Mattituck resident John Tuthill, who is well into his 90s, and a distant cousin of the original Tuthills who built it, remembers as a young boy going there with his father, Ernst C. Tuthill, with their potatoes. "As a boy I remember it as a potato grading shed. There were three to four other grading sheds at the railroad tracks on Depot Lane. All through Oregon Rd. in Mattituck was potato farms. The farmers used to line up the trucks loads of potatoes there, to have them graded. It took about an hour to grade a load of them," Tuthill remembers.

It was an arduous process being a potato farmer in the early 1900s. The farmer would first dig the potaatoes out of the ground with a machine called a potato digger, pulled by two horses. The machine dug them out and laid them on the ground where the pickers would come around, pick them up, and put them into half-bushel baskets. Then they'd dump the baskets into burlap bags containing one bushel weighing 60 pounds, and stack them onto a truck and drive over to the potato shed and wait in line for the grading machine. When your turn came you'd dump the sacks into a sizing machine, which would separate the small potatoes from the large, grading them into 100-pound sacks. They would then be sent off by train to market. Soon after, they would no longer be shipped by train, but trucks.

When paper bags were introduced the grading was reduced to 50-pound paper bags. As modern times advanced the process, machines would grade them into 20-pound, 10-pound and 5-pound paper bags, which we all see in the stores now with a little netted window in the front of the bag, marked grade A for larger potatoes, and grade B for smaller.

Although the shed had become more to farmers than a shed, "If there was a little extra time between market then the guys would play cards," Tuthill recalled. "The barn was a landmark, it's a shame. But the farmers will have to get another place to grade potatoes. I understand the Shulmans will build it up once again. I hope they do," Tuthill concluded.

"Elements of Nature will be the hottest new restaurant on the North Fork, if not on the whole East End"

The Great Cross Sound Ferry Debate

The Ferry Brings In Cars, Which Means More Traffic, But Also Brings In Commerce And Jobs

By R.B. Stuart

There is a lawsuit against the Cross Sound Ferry In Orient that is saying that the ferry is a major cause of the many traffic problems on the North Fork. Citizens are concerned that the traffic is affecting the quality of life on the North Fork, while the ferry says that jobs and commerce created by the new cars is worth it. What's a North Forker to think?

Prior to the 1940s, the major concern for North Forker's was isolation. People worried about eastern Long Island being isolated from the rest of the country. Products from our fruitful farms were virtually inaccessible, except by water. But that mode of transportation did not permit the shipment of perishables, and now it does. This article will address the lawsuit that is going on against the ferry because of traffic problems in the area. A lot of negative information has been given about the ferry. We will address the positives as well as the negatives, which mainly is traffic.

According to local historians, regularly scheduled ferry service connecting Long Island to New England began sometime in the 1930s. Since 1975 Cross Sound Ferry has been the gateway to New England for tens of thousands of East End residents seeking a time saving alternative route to and from New England, which by car can take a grueling seven hours just to Boston.

The Cross Sound Ferry has taken away that driving headache by providing safe, reliable year-round service between Orient Point and New London, Connecticut.

The ferry is an essential life-line, allowing convenient access to New England for residents, businesses, commercial vehicles, college students, and families of the East End.

The ferry is also an economic engine to the North Fork in that it provides a gateway from Long Island to New England.

In 2005, months prior to the lawsuit brought on the ferry by the town, Stony Brook University College of Business did an independent study on ferry use and the interdependence on the economy. Their findings were that approximately $6 million is spent in the town of Southold annually, through various businesses and attractions from 1.3 million travelers.

Cross Sound Ferry not only quietly contributes to local causes, but employs close to 400 employees between Long Island and Connecticut. "We're one of the largest employers in the town," says Stan Mickus director of marketing for 15 years. "And we pay taxes here and buy local goods." Continuing its commitment to support East End businesses, Cross Sound Ferry recently introduced a new program that allows area businesses to post company information on their website absolutely free.

Their ferry service opens up the New England market to Long Islanders for Maine fish, produce, products and nursery. "The East End is such an agricultural based community, and the ferry has played a part in maintaining that life for well over a century," Mickus added. Their online petition is an example of how much those on LI have become accustomed to the convenience. In over six months it has accrued comments from well over 1000 supporters. Local businessmen, with businesses from oysters to canvas, spanning 125 years in business, have come to their aid in protest over the possibilities of 'permanently enjoining and restraining' Cross Sound Ferry from doing business.

Ronald N. Hill is the Principal-in-Charge of Traffic Engineering and Transportation Planning at Dunn Engineering Associates in Westhampton Beach. In 2006 he provided the Town of Southold with an affidavit addressing certain claims raised by the Town with regard to traffic and the ferry terminal. According to the New York State Department of Transportation, average annual daily traffic for the 2.67-mile segment of NYS Route 25, between Narrow River Road and the Cross Sound Ferry Terminal in 2004 was measured at 3,500 vehicles per day. The Lovely Month Of Maybe

It's Finally May On The North Fork And Fresh Vegetables, Cigars And Shopping Can Be Found

By Phyllis Lombardi

Finally. The month of Maybe on the North Fork. March and April waved their early spring goodbyes and we're gifted now with the month of eternal, vernal optimism - May. It's the month of hope, when anything may be.

Milder days, longer days, almost-vacation days, combine to urge this quiet Fork to new possibilities. We look to what is greenin' up and goin' on.

The greenin' up part first. Founded in 1901, Riverhead's Long Island Cauliflower Association is a perennial on the North Fork. Early on, farmers joined forces to facilitate shipping their premier crop to New York City. Now with the production of cauliflower down, Riverhead's cauliflower auction is a thing of the past. But not so the association.

Association employee Barbara Zimnoski is on the job at 7 a.m. most mornings. An hour later in come farmers for fertilizer, landscapers for grass seed and everyone else for flower and vegetable seed and raspberry and blueberry plants.

Barbara agrees that old meets new at the association, especially in Maybe. It seems the association is a kibitzer's heaven. Farmers, said Barbara, stop in for seed, advice, equipment and camaraderie. The chatter is wind and rain and sun and gossip - not necessarily in that order.

Why not change the name, now that the association is no longer "all cauliflower?" Never, said Barbara. "Our name is a piece of history all over Long Island."

There is another new bit of Maybe that could make history. It's found in Southold's Agway and seems appropriate for our crazy world. Topsy Turvy II is an upside-down hanging tomato planter. No caging, staking, weeding, digging. Hang it outside and the plants literally grow down from the bottom of the contraption. Don't ask how. I wonder if you have to stand on your head to harvest.

No maybe about this. You must have seen the bodies atop the Old Steeple Community Church on Main Road in Aquebogue. Those guys have been there for weeks. Well, maybe they come down to eat but they're going at it like crazy, restoring the 200-year-old church. A real Maybe job with new cedar shingles, shutters, lighting, the works

I spoke with Andre Vega who was busy up on the roof. Be assured I remained on the ground and our conversation, though pleasant, was distant. Andre talked of an 1892 cigar package he discovered in old siding he was removing. He, in turn, placed a dollar bill in the new siding.

Andre added that many of the men working with him graduated from Riverhead High School. They'd known each other for years, he said. It was pride and confidence I heard in his voice.

There's Maybe sprucing-up going on in Cutchogue, too. Irene Stewart, a member of the Old Town Art and Crafts Art Gallery and Gift Shop, is sure the brand new sign on the lawn in front of the shop will bring in even more browsers and buyers. Everything in the gallery and gift shop is the work of North Fork people, explained Irene. There was pride in her voice, too.

But I heard concern when I told her I was on my way to Greenport to check out what's new in bathing suits. Guess we all get uneasy about that. Now Greenport has several stores selling beachwear. I started at Arcade and that's where I ended. Here's why.

Before I even considered a bathing suit purchase I was defeated by the brand names, four in particular.

Body I.D. was first. Truthfully, I really don't want to be seen on the beach, much less known.

Lucky Brand was next on the rack. I'd need more than luck and less of me to fit into these.

Longitude was number three. You know, it's not my longitude buggin' me. It's my latitude.

Finally, Options. Yep. That's it. No beach for me. I opt for the movies, long pants, and popcorn, large.

The last indignity? A salesperson mentioned that "skinny" jeans are back. They'll be all over the Fork by July. Maybe, if we work at it, we'll do our home towns proud. Let no voice be raised derisively, "There goes the North Fork, bringing up the rear."

I stopped in Southold's Hart's Hardware on my sad journey home. Their expansion should be finished by the end of summer. Maybe I could find something to help me work my pounds into Body I.D. proportions.

Chris Jerome, Southold High School senior, was behind the counter, selling garbage pails, hoses, wheelbarrows - things to get us moving. Chris has a word for what's going on in Hart's. He calls it "respacing." Everything's moving from one spot to another. There you go. I don't have to lose weight - just shift it. Thanks, Chris. See you on the beach.

And so I say maybe this is the year we'll hike all the trails, swim every day, tolerate no weeds, cook out at least twice a week, ride our bikes, paint the deck, volunteer at all the beach cleanup days, go to all the kids' baseball games, give gifts of our flowers to those who have no garden. Oh, the opportunities. North Fork, if ever we would leave you, it wouldn't be in Maybe.

Over the Barrel.....With Lenn Thompson
Three Summer Sippers from Sagaponack

It's not quite beach season yet, but it's probably on your mind. And, Wolffer Estate in Sagaponack has released three wines that belong on the beach — and at your next BBQ.

As you have probably noticed, Long Island wine's "sweet spot" in terms of price-for-quality tends to be in the $20+ realm. Unfortunately, that turns a lot of wine drinkers off, but one of my favorite wines for less than $15 has long been Wolffer's simple-but-tasty La Ferme Martin Chardonnay ($14). My first bottle from the newly released 2004 vintage surprised me — the oak influence seemed much more apparent than past vintages — not a good thing in my book. Had one of our favorite summer "house" wines lost its decidedly East Coast style?

Perhaps it was just my palate that day or that individual bottle, but upon opening a second bottle a few days later, my fears were allayed. The nose was fresh with ripe pears and citrus with only a sprinkling of oak inflection. Refreshingly light but ripe, this is a fruit-driven summer sipper with abundant pear and apple flavors accented by a squeeze of lime. For $14 (and you can find it for as little as $10 at some wine shops) this is a great pool- or ocean-side wine that offers nicely balanced fruit and acidity. It also went nicely with the parmesan-sweet pea risotto cakes my wife and I enjoyed last week.

Despite what our friends in California might lead you to believe, rose wines, also known as "blush" in some circles, needn't (and I'd argue shouldn't) be sweet and syrupy like their ubiquitous white zinfandel. Wolffer Estate 2005 Rose ($14) is made in a dry style but is sure to appeal to white zin and more serious wine drinkers alike. More salmon-orange than pink, the nose reminds me of fresh picked peaches and red cherries. Made with 48% merlot, 39% chardonnay, 7.8% cabernet franc and 5.2% cabernet sauvignon, it's fuller on the palate than I prefer, but fine acidity and a gentle zing of CO2 bring balance. Flavors similar to the nose — peach and cherry — are joined by a discernable lime character on the finish that makes this wine a good pair for Caribbean or even lighter Mexican fare. Fish tacos anyone?

If you're looking for a more serious summer wine to enjoy at your next dinner party, see if you can get your hands on a bottle or two of Wolffer Estate 2005 Pinot Gris ($24). Winemaker Roman Roth only made 253 cases of this delightful white from grapes grown on the North Fork, so get some while it lasts. The fresh nose is redolent of honeydew melon, blanched almonds, lemon zest and flowers. With a slightly glycerin mouthfeel, this wine brings together citrus, melon nutty flavors with excellent acidity and minerality on the finish. Serve this white with grilled fish, pork or pasta with alfredo-walnut sauce.

all of this traffic were attributable to the existence of the ferry operation, which it is not, elsewhere in the Town of Southold, average daily traffic volumes are as high as 13,300 vehicles per day (in Mattituck) and 12,500 vehicles per day (in Cutchogue).

The great majority of traffic on the western portion of Route 25 is not attributable to the ferry operation, particularly in light of the fact that much of the ferry traffic utilizes County Road 48, which runs parallel to Route 25 west of Greenport, and does not pass through the local downtown areas, making it more desirable for drivers traveling through the area.

When Cross Sound Ferry requested a change of zone variance on property adjacent to its existing Orient Point terminal, the Town of Southold refused the request. A change of zone, on property already owned by Cross Sound Ferry, would alleviate most of the parking problems that the town says need to be addressed. So without the additional parking that's needed, cars will continue to park along the shoulder of the road, generating parking tickets and revenue for the town.

And if Cross Sound Ferry service is interrupted or extinguished, the repercussions would be daunting. "This has a trickle down theory of cause and effect. It would cause a degradation in the quality of life," Mickus states. By limiting the access between New England and Long Island you'll reduce the number of visitors, potential visitors, students and the movement of commercial products. It will choke off the economic infusion of tourists visiting wineries, farm stands, retail businesses and restaurants, while crippling the year round North Fork residents from getting on and off the island. This will also cause local job loss and hardship to those families who work for Cross Sound Ferry, resulting in a year round financial drain of major proportions that will impact everyone in one way or another.

This one-man operation that expanded into a three generation, family business, connecting the life-line of the waters edge of New England and Long Island communities, could end. And we would revert back to the isolation we found ourselves in, a century ago.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"THE ART OF JUSTICE": ILLUSTRATIONS
BY MARILYN CHURCH

We have our doubts that "justice" is an art form, although "jurisprudence," or the philosophy of law, may be at times. Regardless, Marilyn Church's illustrations of famous trials through the years can be considered an art, involving aesthetic values and interpretation.

Drawing, generally, has a significant place to play in art history, particularly when we recall examples like Surrealism's "The Exquisite Corpse."

While Ms. Church's work cannot adhere to a surrealistic style, having to be realistic for obvious reasons, there's artistry galore. In a nutshell, her illustrations are not merely a matter of recording a scene during a trial (like a witness's testimony), but capturing diverse dynamics: relationships between people; turning points; individual demeanors.

Ms. Church must ultimately highlight the inherent drama that may be present. In this way, she is not only recreating an event, but also conveying a plot or story with "characters." For some strange reason, her drawings assume fictional elements within an emotional context, and therein lies their "art."

How does Ms. Church accomplish this feat? One

device is through delineating body language. From posture/ stance, eye contact, facial expressions and gestures, we can get a good idea of what people are thinking and most importantly, feeling. Take for example, the Son of Sam Trial. David Berkowitz is pictured in the foreground, his face showing little emotion, his eyes looking off into the distance.

Conversely, a lawyer in the John Gotti Trial is pointing at Mr. Gotti as he talks to (we assume) a witness. There is strength and focus in his expression, and we feel the emotional impact.

Similarly, a female witness is giving testimony in the Puff Daddy Trial; she shows a strong sense of self through her facial expressions as she faces the singer directly, his foregrounded figure evoking a distanced demeanor.

Ms. Church uses other elements to convey the narrative and its emotional content. Her images are up-close and personal, still allowing for all the principals to be seen. Thus, we, the viewers, become part of the courtroom ourselves, perhaps as jury members. This technique is one of Ms. Church's most potent.

Some of Ms. Church's illustrations are long shots, so to speak, giving us an overview of the courtroom. Her point-of-view varies here, from a worm's-eye view at the Bakke Hearing to a bird's-eye-view at the IBM Trial. Either way, the perspective is powerful.

"The Art of Justice" is on view at East End Books in East Hampton and at the Bernarducci Meisel Gallery in New York until May 31.

HONORING THE ARTIST: LAURA WESTLAKE

It wasn't Orient, New York, where Laura Westlake, our cover artist, resides year round, but it ran a close second as far as her favorite places go. Rather, it was in the foothills outside Lake Tahoe that Ms. Westlake found herself vacationing and where we caught up with her for this interview. "I could live here in a minute," the artist remarked, "yet Orient is too much to give up."

It's easy to understand why Ms. Westlake likes the western part of the United States, having attended Santa Barbara College in California. Even so, she's a native Long Islander, having moved from Sayville to Orient five years ago. "I love the peace and quiet of this place," she explains. "And I want to stay on the water."

It's also easy to understand why Ms. Westlake finds the setting so perfect: she runs a wild life rehabilitation center for migratory birds.

And she has a federal and state license to prove it. In fact, the next several months will be particularly busy for Ms. Westlake. "From May to September, we're busier than usual although birds come here all year," she notes with enthusiasm. "I have as many as twenty-five of them here at one time, mostly crows. Did you know that crows are smarter than people? They mate for life; it's important that I get them well so they can go back to their family."

(That particular remark evoked a conversation about Hitchcock's The Birds and the fact that Ms. Westlake had recently visited the Marin County location where the movie was shot.)

Ms. Westlake's passion for helping birds, including not only crows but songbirds as well, has impacted on her artistic life. She takes photographs of all her creatures, using the images in her artwork. She will often combine still life subjects, like lemons, with a bird flying in the window. "This juxtaposition makes it surreal," Ms. Westlake remarks, "but there's no hidden meaning. It's more about color. I'll combine oranges, for example, of still life subjects with a blue jay."

While there's no meaning behind the birds' presence, they are still significant. "They have become my signature," Ms. Westlake explains.

"I can remain true to myself when I draw the birds. They convey who I am."

The fact that Ms. Westlake has avoided using the computer in her art also tells a lot about who she is. "I did TV commercials in the late 1970s, before computers, using a technique called 'animatics,' where I drew little still images that were put into motion. I'm against using computers for creating art works. Imagine what the Masters would think about them? They would be laughing themselves silly."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Westlake's work can be seen at Gallery M on Main Street in Greenport year round. She will be having a show there in October.

Dave Evans' MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Poseidon

In this remake of the 1972 classic, The Poseidon Adventure, director Wolfgang Petersen finds himself comfortably at sea once again, following his earlier hits The Perfect Storm and Das Boot. It's visually impressive stuff and nobody could deny Petersen's affinity and understanding of the sea, but the plot itself feels weak and unnecessary, manned by the dregs of the C-list.

The Da Vinci Code

What to say? The film of the absurdly successful book is directed by the ever-adequate (and rarely anything more) Ron Howard and stars America's favorite actor Tom Hanks, as Robert Langdon, the Harvard professor of religious symbology who gets caught up in a religious conspiracy. If I told you not to go because the plot is dull and dumb and none of these people need more money, would it make any difference?

Goal! Living The Dream

Just in time to capitalize on the excitement of a world on the brink of yet another World Cup, comes this sequel to the 2005 surprise hit. This isn't so much filmmaking as it is the sporting equivalent of a music video, but nonetheless, with cameos from David Beckham, Ronaldo and Zinedine Zidane, this will please any soccer fan.

Just My Luck

Before her attempt to make it as a serious actress in Robert Altman's upcoming A Prairie Home Companion sees the light of day, cherish the chance (if cherish is the right word) to see Lindsay Lohan in the bubblegum world from whence she came. Here she's an heiress who suddenly finds herself swapping her good luck with the bad luck of a tramp. Utterly sickening.

Mission: Impossible 3

Now, there's no explanation for Tom Cruise. Children of the eighties fondly remember Cocktail and Top Gun, but those memories are fast being clouded by his current, all-too-public insanity. If you can put that aside for two hours (and that is, understandably, a huge "if") then this is really good, action-adventure entertainment. J. J. Abrams of "Alias" and "Lost" fame wrote and directed so you can thank him, not the loon dancing on the sofa.

Hoot

It's a film about a kid trying to save some endangered owls and so by rights should be sickening, but it's hard to really fault this simple, endearing film. Logan Lerman does admirable work in the central role with strong support from Luke Wilson, Tim Blake Nelson and the evergreen Jimmy Buffett. Very nice indeed and pleasantly timed at ninety minutes.

An American Haunting

Based on the allegedly true story of "America's only recorded death by spirit entity," this dreadful little film makes up the weekly horror quota. Flashing between the early 19th century and the present day, this is embarrassing work for stars Donald Sutherland and Sissy Spacek. This is director Courtney Solomon's second feature after the execrable Dungeons and Dragons. Let's hope and pray there won't be a third.

EAST HAMPTON DAY CARE

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

One would think we'd be loath to remember terrible, catastrophic events and try to detach ourselves from them and certainly not want to be reminded. Alas, it seems the more enormous the tragedy the more intimately personal it becomes. It might be less agonizing if you felt the distance between allowed for some solace, but instead you find that your heart can be crushed by its nearness.

Recently we heard of a neighbor's child being taken by the horrific acts of September 11th, 2001. The story arose because of the release of the film United 93 which pictures the events causing the demise of the young woman. In documentary fashion, it recreates what possibly occurred on United Airline flight 93 to bring it down into a Pennsylvania field, aborting the hijackers' Washington D.C. target of the White House or the Capitol.

Too often, Doris Gronlund of Sag Harbor has had to relive the awful day her daughter, Linda, boarded flight 93. She had called her mother moments before accompanying her friend, Joseph Deluca, onto the aircraft. In April 2002 the FBI had her listen to the cockpit tapes. Linda's sister finally allowed her to listen to Linda's message left on her answering machine. It was a wrenching, last words report of the incident and affectionate wishes. Ultimately, she was asked approval to use her daughter's identity in the film, written and directed by British film maker Paul Greengrass, who'd recreated the 1972 extreme violence of British paratroopers attempting to disperse nonviolent Irish protesters in his 2002 film Bloody Sunday. We cannot really compare the two deadly days. The September 11th attacks are of such monstrous, cataclysmic proportions, they resonate with immense sensitivity, especially as it has been capitalized upon and used and misused to further the needs of so many. Doris Gronlund, reportedly, is content with the depiction of her daughter and others on board and that it's a fine testimonial to their memory. After the studio's screening, she and others were left with a sense of "peace and quiet." She's also quoted as saying, "What happened on that plane will always be a mystery to me."

That is one of the hurdles in making a film of this type, "A creative work based on fact." Although previously covered on television (a few times) and fed by many sources of information, the facts remain buried in the field near Shanksville, Pa, in the ghost of a demolished Boeing 757. The remains have long been removed and a memorial will be built with the help of some proceeds from this film. As for the cries of exploitation, I am not the person to ask. I was appalled when that ghastly day's remembrance was reduced to two numbers - 9/11 - the same sort of abbreviated, euphemistic title given Iraq battle offensives to sound upbeat and positive. I'm old enough to remember the Vietnam War when our "War Department" was re-titled the "Department of Defense." I'm also old enough to remind you of

"Jingoism" (extreme nationalism marked by a beligerent foreign policy).

United 93 is a fair and decent film, but a Hollywood formula thriller in style and treatment like Mr. Greengrass' direction of the CIA spy entertainment, The Bourne Supremacy; snazzy hand held camera work and close cut, kinetic editing and adept cross-cutting between the airliner and the concerned people on the ground, some of whom are the real thing. The movie depicts everyone as an average, not necessarily heroic individual, including the terrorists who have religious convictions and reflect the same doubts and fears as their captives. If there is an ingenious note in United 93, it is how they all take on a grandeur that belies their ordinariness. Justly, the director has the momentous words "Let's roll," uttered as they attacked the terrorists, said simply as a matter of fact cue, not a patriotic slogan.

In time, your movie reviewer, this sentimental ol' gentleman of swing, may be able to write of the horrid day without the catch in his throat and a pushy tear. For now, I'm flummoxed by the production of a movie seemingly unrequired. It has no focal center or reasoning. The characters are made up to look like the actual persons, but have no depth. It lacks a sense of background and history. Instead, there is movie magic. We supply the real emotion triggered by the factual basis.

In our incredible, modern times of unbelievable technology, perhaps the most important tool was the cell phone, on which, without reporters and grinding television cameras, Ms. Gronlund and her daughter, Linda, were able to exchange, "I love you" before the intrusion of the terror, the media and the Government.

Entertainment In Town

review: the drowsy chaperone...by gordin & christiano

The Drowsy Chaperone, a spoof of Broadway musicals from the 1920s, is an homage to the golden era of theatre when people longed for nothing more than to be magically transported to another world. Although little more than a parody of stock characters singing a pastiche of songs that steals boldly from later day musicals as well, the evening is served with such tremendous style and wit that the loving tribute actually stops time. We are allowed for a brief hour and 40 minutes to chase all the blues away and escape into the madness of the musical theatre world.

The evening begins with the audience sitting in a pitch-black theatre for a few moments before we hear the voice of our host, simply referred to as Man in Chair, saying, "Dear Lord please let it be good." We are then taken into the cluttered New York City apartment of this diehard musical theatre fan, where he sits stage right in an overstuffed easy chair next to his record player. Yes, record player, no CDs for him. He loves the static from the needle. "To me that's the sound of a time machine starting up."

To cheer himself he decides to play the cast recording from one of his favorite ditzzy shows, The Drowsy Chaperone. He tells us to ignore the lyrics as he ushers us back in time to the Morosco Theatre, November 1928, by playing the record, and the madcap musical suddenly bursts to life right in his apartment. Our ecstatic guide shares his running commentary throughout the evening, encouraging us to let loose for a zany ride down memory lane.

The show, with its screwball characters singing and dancing, is nothing more than silly fun that whimsically floats on air. The musical within the musical tells the tale of a pampered Broadway star, Janet Van De Graff (Sutton Foster), who plans to give up show business to marry the dashing bachelor Robert Martin (Troy Britton Johnson). Her producer (Lenny Wolpe) attempts to sabotage the wedding by having the Latin lover Aldolpho (Danny Burstein) seduce her, but Aldolpho mistakes her chaperone (Beth Leavel) for the star instead. All sorts of crazy shenanigans arise, involving the rest of the wacky characters that include a pair of lunatic gangsters posing as a vaudeville team (Jason and Garth Kravits), the wedding hostess, Mrs. Tottendale (Georgia Engel), her manservant Underling (Edward Hibbert), the producer's blonde bimbo girlfriend, Kitty (Jennifer Smith) and several others.

The imaginative scenic design by David Gallo magically comes to life from out of nowhere. Set pieces float from the ceiling, emerge from walls, and characters make elaborate entrances out of the refrigerator. There is even a trap door that allows for dramatic exits through the floor.

Man in Chair is a contrived gimmick, but as conceived by Bob Martin, who co-authored the show with Don McKellar, he's a charming delight that keeps the outstanding cast on their magical carpet ride. He saves the evening from being just another parody with his refreshing comments. "This is ridiculous," or "I hate that scene," and reminding us; "Everything works out in musicals. In the real world nothing works out and the only people who burst into song are the hopelessly deranged."

Indeed everything about this intoxicating cocktail, as directed and choreographed by Casey Nicholaw, is spiked with sparkle and wit. The uniformly vivacious performances are often hilarious, never failing to keep you smiling throughout. The engaging songs with their vibrant score by Lisa Lambert and Greg Morrison give everyone a moment in the spotlight. The dynamic ensemble is having the time of their lives and their effervescent joy is contagious. The audience was absolutely delirious with laughter from start to finish.

The Drowsy Chaperone opened on Broadway at the Marquis Theatre, 1535 Broadway between 46th and 47th Streets, on May 1. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster by calling 212-307-4100 or online at www.ticketmaster.com or in person at the theatre box office.

Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring Previews

Saturday, May 13 SHE-DEVIL

Hell hath no fury like a wronged Long Island woman. Meryl Streep gets her just rewards for stealing Roseanne Barr's no-goodnick husband. Untrammelled mayhem and laughs from Barr's makeover while destroying her ex and wealthy romance novelist Streep.

Saturday, May 20 THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP

John Irving's jarring account of an unorthodox mother Glenn Close and odyssean son Robin Williams who hopscotches over our shores absurdly and melodramatically. John Lithgow as a transsexual stops the very busy traffic.

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

preview: she-devil

This Saturday, May 13th at 1 p.m. the Ross School auditorium screens will shudder with vehement revenge as a Long Island woman's wrath darn near topples trees. But we hope it doesn't happen close to the school on Goodfriend Drive off Route 114 in East Hampton. Gee, it could fry the refreshments served at Dan's Papers' "They Made The Movies Here" Free Film Festival.

Long Island women! Wow! When crossed by slime-bag men, they can bring down houses more vehemently than a hurricane-fed tornado... or bring down the house with laughter, as in the case of producer/director Susan Seidelman's 1989 film, She-Devil, from the novel by Fay Weldon which ignited a British TV mini-series. Whether the woman is a full-time mother and totally un-liberated housewife smack in the middle of the middle class on Long Island or a fabulous, wealthy, most-of-the-time over-sexed devourer of men, romance writer, living on the monied dunes of the East End – they both are too tough to mess with. Be careful. Be very, very careful. The malicious laughs they produce can hurt you a whole lot.

Watch out for Meryl Streep, she is sleek, gorgeously pink and poisonous as the ultra successful writer of palpitating, pulp-porn fiction. She is hilariously outrageous in the broad, comedic performance of her career. She alone is worth the price of admission. What in the world am I blathering about? There is no admission price for Dan's Papers' "They Made The Movies Here" Festival presentations. It's all free.

Roseanne Barr, as a cheated-on, then deserted, housewife, is in her past-incarnation as a look-alike Elizabeth Taylor at her blimpy best, but with a really ugly hairy mole in place of Taylor's big, beauty spot. Roseanne spares nothing. She manages TOTAL, wicked-hatred when her no-account accountant, played with long blonde hair and a skinny, bare-behind, by Ed Begley, Jr. He leaves her for the rich, thin, (shaped-by-expensive-massages) loins of Meryl Streep. Roseanne's clutzy-wifey takes tons of abuse and pain from her grubby-hubby, and scene/husband-stealer Meryl. But only to a point. A sharp point.

It all starts when the three meet at a Guggenheim Museum party. Meryl and Begley's eyes meld! Roseanne spills a drink.....on them. Begley drives Meryl home..... all the way! Meryl slips into something comfy.....They have champagne in front of the fire. They snuggle. Her hand falls between his legs. The heat isn't only in the fireplace. He doesn't get home. Roseanne's life with her two children gets more and more grotesque toward the final humiliation, when Ed becomes forever Meryl's – with her sexy house boy (A. Martinez) and two grand dogs (Poodle and Borzoi) their days are full of chiffon perversion. Roseanne's days and nights are devilishly vengeful. She doesn't just get mad, she (as they say on TV) gets even.....even madder.

While the kids are away, Roseanne (AKA the She Devil) utilizes every household appliance to systematically destroy their house. From then on, just as systematically, she devises clever plot after plot to demolish the luxurious lives of her two mortal enemies. A few examples: She foists her (and Ed's) children on the couple. Then Meryl's old Momma (Sylvia Miles) gets tossed into the mix. Then a vamp secretary is flung by Roseanne into Begley's already corrupted office... and ultimately, the infernal Internal Revenue Service. Oh! Roseanne is such a devil! She has been (all the while) rebuilding her own life and deconstructing that mole. But gosh.....the destruction! The Suffolk Film Council is still ru-der. The day they allowed Ms. Seidelman to film out here.

While there, watch out for possible lightning strikes! But not to worry. Under the tender, watchful hosting of Sarah Halsey, you are in good hands. Whilst I, your humble servant Guy de Fraumeni, has his hands full in very sunny climes.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS, and European feature films. He has judged the major film and TV award competitions. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey

When In Manhattan...BY OLIVER PETERSON

Pigeons Plus

I've just returned from a two-week trip in Florida. My grandmother lives in Naples. It's in the southwest, gulf side, portion of the state. I try to visit every year. It's been a semi-consistent tradition since I was a kid. For whatever reason, when I'm down there, enjoying the spectacular local birds is always near the top of my list of things to do. When I say, "enjoy," I don't mean in Dijon and marmalade with a carafe of cabernet. I actually like bird watching. The lively population of herons, gulls, egrets, ibis, ducks, eagles, pelicans, anhinga, colorful gallinules, osprey, vultures, storks, and the occasional roseate spoonbill give me great pleasure. My years of birding there, and the accompaniment of good field guides, have given me a solid enough background to identify most species even if they're flying high above the saw grass and mangroves. Out here on the East End our birding opportunities aren't too shabby either, but for the most part my passion for birds seems to live in Florida. I would imagine, however, that we have a fairly significant number of birders among us. Places like the Morton Refuge, off Noyac Road, wouldn't be so popular if we didn't. There's nothing quite like having a chickadee land on your palm to munch birdseed.

Right now you're probably asking yourself what this has to do with Manhattan. Most people would attest to seeing boundless numbers of pigeons – or sky rats to New Yorkers – in the city, but might not know that Gotham is actually home to literally hundreds of species of birds. Depending on the season, one can find all sorts of rare and interesting varieties of our avian friends. For example, in the spring (that's now, folks) it's extremely rare but possible to see a white pelican in the metropolitan area.

Swallow-tailed kites also miraculously appear in spring, but this isn't the only season to spot birds that would give any urbanite reason for a double – maybe triple – take. Late fall can bring out the massive and soaring bird of prey, the golden eagle. Piping plovers find their way to New York in the warmer months, but so far they're not nesting in Midtown or the city bridges. As we all know, shutting down wide sections of Hamptons beach is painful enough, I'd hate to see what a few errant and stubborn little birds could do to an already tenuous metro traffic situation. Turkey vultures and loons are two more odd species to appear in the city.

New York has enough birding action to shake up an avian flu paranoiac, but more important, enough to have an Audubon Society hub of its own. New York City Audubon (NYCA) has an office on West 23rd Street. They run all sorts of bird-related programs, like extensive efforts to improve and protect habitat, educate the public on environmental issues, serve as a resource for birders, and best of all, hold classes, seminars, and excursions to study, enjoy, and appreciate the city's birds. Created in 1979, the NYCA began modestly, but with over 8000 members it is now the largest of Audubon's 518 chapters. Check their website for a list of the numerous classes and field trips. You can stick to Manhattan and meet for one of many Central Park expeditions, or be daring and visit one of 40 frequented birding destinations mentioned in the New York City Audubon Society Guide to Finding Birds in the Metropolitan Area. Among them, Jamaica Bay, New York Harbor, Inwood Hill Park, Staten Island's Great Kills Park, Breezy Point in Queens, and many other spots scattered about the five boroughs.

This weekend NYCA is hosting the 1st Annual City Birding Challenge and their 22nd Annual Birdathon. On Saturday, May 13, from midnight to midnight, birders of all levels will scour the city to count bird species and raise money to protect the birds of New York. The events coincide with the peak of spring migration and the International Migratory Bird Day. To register or find out more call (212) 691-7483 or go to NYCAudubon.org.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

A New Section of Path

Several years ago Southampton Town, Golf on the Bridge, and STPS worked together to create a trail along the perimeter of the golf course. We were unsure whether this trail would become part of the Paumanok Path, and the route had changed about three times, so we blazed the trail with yellow blazes. Originally, the plan was for the Paumanok Path to continue along Middle Line Highway, passing by a sand mine. However the trucks flying by in clouds of dust on the Highway, along with the noise of heavy machinery and the smell of huge quantities of chipped wood during the summer hardly made up for the panoramic view of Noyac Bay as seen from the edge of the sandpit.

This new trail generally runs through laurel and oak woods over a rolling topography. In some places the trail corridor is narrow, but most of the time the walker is unaware of the nearby houses and golf course. I expect that in the not so distant future, the trail will be moved again to make use of land the Town has recently purchased. This will eliminate a "boundary trail" that found its origin in a survey line between two properties. Throughout Long Island many trails have evolved from these survey lines delineating boundaries between various publicly owned properties and/or the properties of private landowners. These "straight-line trails" run straight up and down hills, creating shortcuts for water and causing ravines to form. A trail should run along ridges and across hills, so water will flow across the trail tread; this creates sustainable trails. When traveling down a hill the trail should turn to "drop" the water off the trail.

A couple of weeks ago I began painting the Paumanok Path blazes running west from the junction of Stony Hill and Brick Kiln Roads. This is an awkward place to park. Here, the path is composed in part by pieces of boundary trails strung together, and has some issues with erosion caused by fall line construction. The portion of trail near Ruggs Path, where I was working this week, has some excellently built trails, winding their way up hills and traveling along ridges. One thing that anyone hiking this section of trail must be aware of, though, is that there are still many stumps and roots of laurel remaining in the trail tread. It will take several years before these hazards can be completely removed from the tread. It is important to lift your feet higher than usual when you walk in the woods. This will help you avoid tripping on low obstacles. Most of us are accustomed to walking on flat floors and sidewalks so we tend to skim our feet over surfaces as we walk. This sets us up to trip when we walk in the woods so remember to lift your feet and watch where you step.

The section of trail where I was working leads out onto Ruggs Path again, north of where we entered the woods. The trail follows Ruggs Path a short distance north, cuts over a guardrail, and climbs up a very steep embankment. From here the trail brings you along the edge of the Atlantic Golf Course. Steps may need to be built here in the future to provide access to this segment of trail. On the opposite end, the trail running east from Brick Kiln is blocked by fallen trees and has some wetland issues that the trails group will need to address.

From County Road 39, head east past Southampton College, bear left onto North Sea Road. Follow the sign for Route 52, Sag Harbor and North Sea. After traveling 2.4 miles, bear right by a small sign on the right side of the road that reads Morton NWR 5 miles. You are now on Noyac Road. In exactly 5 miles, you will see the entrance to the Morton National Wildlife Refuge on the left side of the road. After another 2.2 miles you will see Trout Pond and Ruggs Path on the right side of the road. Follow Ruggs Path south. Watch for where the road curves to the left (if you continue straight you end up on a driveway). At 0.7 mile the pavement ends and Ruggs Path continues as a narrow woods road. This is where the Paumanok Path crosses the road; look for the white blazes of the Paumanok Path. There are a couple of expansions in the road shoulder near the end of the paved road. Get as far off the road as possible without trapping yourself in sand. I saw some huge trucks "fly" down this winding narrow road, so be careful!

DAN'S TRAVELS

AFRICAN DIARY: CAMPS, HOTELS AND TOURS

By Dan Rattiner

Here are some places we stayed that I would recommend for anyone who wants to go to South Africa.

First of all, if you are going to organize a trip so far away, it would be best to have some experts do it for you. We were not on any kind of tour. We were just two people looking for an adventure in a place that offers an infinite variety of choice. And so we found an expert familiar with the area to organize such a trip for us.

EXPLORE AFRICA in Boulder, Colorado, was recommended to us by numerous friends who had trips to Africa organized by them. They prepared the most extraordinary trip imaginable for us, with an itinerary that ran to seven pages. They called us before we left and when we got back. They asked for feedback about some of the places they booked for us. As for their ability, they put into their itinerary for us every last detail, including what sign a person would be holding for us at the airport to transfer us to a hotel in Johannesburg or Capetown or Livingstone. They made not one single error. And everything they booked for us was, without exception, fabulous. I could not imagine how a trip like this could have been done better. ExploreAfrica.com or Explore Africa, Box 77639 Steamboat Springs, Co. 80477. Call 970-871-0065. Ask for Elizabeth Rand or Cherri.

GETTING THERE. There is a direct flight from JFK to Johannesburg, the beginning point of any trip to South Africa, only with South African Airlines and it is a 16-hour flight. We chose a different way of getting there. The thing to do is to take a night flight to Europe, then go from a European Capital down to Johannesburg on another night flight the next day. The trip across the pond is six hours. The trip down to Johannesburg is ten hours. Just sleep through it. And go first class, where they have seats that convert flat into beds. If you are put off by the astronomical fares to do this (first class runs about $11,000 roundtrip), then use points. 180,000 American Express points will convert to a roundtrip first class on Air France or Virgin Atlantic. Doing the journey this way resulted in our spending full days touring London and Paris coming and going. Book six months in advance for seats with points.

THE FAIRLAWN. You'll need to stay overnight in Johannesburg after your long flight down. We stayed at a nice hotel out by the airport called the Intercontinental Sun, but another time we stayed about ten miles from the airport (and about ten miles from Johannesburg) at the Fairlawns Boutique Hotel and Spa, which is one of the great hotels of that country. John and Anna Thacker, the owners of this hotel, purchased what had once been the private country residence of Mary Oppenheimer, the heir to the gold mining company of that name. Looking more like a Romanesque Palace than anything else, there is a pool, dining room, patio, bar and library, a gym and spa, which includes an outdoor Balinese hot tub, terraces and gardens, conference facilities and suites named after and decorated for famous residents. We stayed in the Nelson Mandela Suite. Alma Road Morningside Manor, Sandton. Tel 27 (11) 804-2540. $216 pp a night includes meals.

SUSSI & CHUMA. This is a lodge along the Zambese River 15 miles upstream from Victoria Falls in Zambia. Located in the middle of a game reserve, animals abound, but you are high above everything in huts connected to one another with boardwalks. You'll probably see monkeys and baboons below. The open-air restaurant looks out over a swimming pool to the river, where hippos are often seen. They also offer a boat ride every night to watch sunset on the river, if you don't care to watch it from shore by a bonfire above the dock. The tree-house huts are large and airy, and each unit has floor to ceiling sliding French doors, interiors that feature Kuba cloth, white muslin and elegant teak. There is a sitting area and private deck. We loved it. Sussi and Chuma is named after the two servants who carried the body of explorer David Livingstone across more than 1,500 harsh miles to the British Consul at Zanzibar. Box 218 Private Bag E891 Manda Hills, Lusaka, Zambia. Livingstone Road, Livingston, Zambia. Phone 260-3-324-426. starofafrica.com. $300 pp a night includes meals and game drives.

LEBALA CAMP. This is one of the finest tent camps in Africa, located in the Linyanti marshes. There are eight luxurious tents that feature en suite bathrooms with enclosed and attached outdoor showers. In the main tent, there is a lounge, bar, dining room, gift shop, fireplace area, living room with an adjacent swimming pool and deck. The tents are beautifully decorated with artifacts of local design, and all tents overlook expansive tracts of African plains in every direction. There are the three meals that are buffet fabulous, but the real attraction of Lebala is the game. You are in an area that has more elephants and giraffes nearby than perhaps any other game reserve in Botswana. You'll see lion, leopard and cheetah and sometimes endangered wild dogs. Night is by lantern light but there is electricity during the day. Lebala has its own airstrip. See the website at www.kkwando.co.za. Lebala is in a remote area near the Namibia border. To get there call 267-686-1449. $305 pp a night includes meals, local wines and game drives.

KWARA CAMP. Much like Lebala Camp, Kwara is located on the edge of the waters of the Okavango Delta, one of the most beautiful environments on Earth. This delta covers more than 12,000 square miles and there is lots of game. Accommodations are in spacious Meru tents situated on raised teak decks overlooking the plains and, particularly, a nearby lagoon in which reside eight hippos. The facilities are much like at Lebala, and the camp is part of the chain of tents owned by the same owner, so the website and phone are the same. There is no phone service at either Kwara or Lebala, except they do have a Satellite phone available for emergencies. $305 pp includes meals, local wines and game drives.

JACK'S CAMP. For a completely different experience, you have to stay at this tent camp, much like Kwara and Lebala, but set in the middle of the Makgadikgadi pans, a moonscape with an oasis, upon which the camp sits. The place is set out like an old hunting lodge, complete with glass cases with stuffed aardvarks, hunting rifles, Persian rugs, the finest art Africa has to offer and a terrific cuisine that features an on-premises pastry chef. There's an airstrip for Jack's but otherwise this is in uncharted Africa, very near the geographic center of Botswana. Ask for Super as a guide. Phone 267-241-2277. $648 pp includes meals and game drives.

LEOPARD HILLS LODGE is a luxurious, almost magical lodge that sits on a hill in northern South Africa overlooking a watering hole. Kudu, impala, warthogs and buffalo can be frequently seen there. The lodge is like a fairytale and our suite of rooms had a private swimming pool and hot tub with a waterfall over one side that rained down to the ground like a falls. In the living room, on the table by a glass slider, there was a watercolor paint set and pad of paper if we were to get inspired. The decoration throughout our suite was of museum quality and fabulous. And besides the game drives — you are on the edge of the Kruger National Park — there is much activity at the lodge, including a gym, a spa, and a second story sliding glass enclosed massage room with 360 degree views that appeared to be something out of Harry Potter. The cuisine was a match for the best restaurants in NYC. There was a souvenir shop, a library, and — we had just missed this — a day care for some baby leopards left there every day for a month for the staff to take care of while mom went off to hunt. And as at every other lodge, there were morning and night game drives. Private airstrip. It's in the Sabi Sand Game Reserve. Stay clear of monkeys in trees. You can call Leopard Hills at 27-13-737-6626. Website is www.leopardhills.com. $900 pp per night includes meals, liquor and game drives and all services except massage etc.

SINGITA. In 2004, Conde Nast Publications voted Singita as the Best Resort regardless of price in the world. And it is. Built to the same grand and fabulous specifications as Leopard Hills, it is even more luxurious, if that is possible. Also in the Sabi Sand Game Reserve, it commands sweeping views over the Sand River and open plains beyond where giraffe slowly lope. Each suite has a living room, double sided fireplaces and sun deck and private plunge pool. There is a health and leisure spa with massage and beauty treatments, a huge staff of perhaps 60 people serving the occupants of just 8 units, and when you sign in you will meet your butler, who will take care of you while you are there. Whether you stay at Singita Ebony or Singita Boulders (the former is more traditional, the latter a bit more spectacular), you will not forget this experience. Website is www.singita.com. Box 23367, Claremont 7735, South Africa. Call 27-21-683-3424. $1190 pp per night includes meals, liquor and game drives and all services except massage etc.

CAPE GRACE. This is probably the best hotel in Capetown. It's located at the V&A Waterfront, is done up in a classic English style, has a restaurant, pool, afternoon tea and library. Also, it faces out on both a working harbor and a huge waterfront shopping area that features street performers, sailboat and motorboat trips, outdoor cafes, concerts, even the government sponsored boat trip to Robben Island, the prison, now a museum, where Nelson Mandela spent 20 years in captivity. Think Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco crossed with Gosman's Dock in Montauk. They have a courtesy car, a Mercedes that will take you all over downtown Capetown, even to the tramway that goes all the way up to the top of Table Mountain at the back of the city. Box 51387, Waterfront 8002, Capetown, South Africa. Call 27-21-410-7100. website capegrace.com. $365 pp per night luxury room and breakfast.

I'd like to recommend Cathy Raymond, a local South African resident of Vintage Cape Tours, who spent a whole wonderful day with us touring the Capetown area. Reach her at 27-0-21-872-9252.

One Article of Clothing – One Thousand New Ideas

My rule of thumb when shopping has always been the same: if I am going to get a lot of use out of something, then it's worth buying. It prevents me from getting really random articles of clothing that seem like a good idea at the time, but really are never appropriate to wear. Well, almost. I must admit that I have a few furry hats and couple of pairs of plaid grandpa pants that don't often see the light of day. But overall, I make pretty good use of my wardrobe. Still, there is one item that has proven more versatile, more accessible, and thus more valuable than the rest. That item was 45 cents on Koh Sarn Road in downtown Bangkok, and it cannot be called by one name alone.

On days when I roll out of bed too late to shower, I am fashionable in my headscarf. On days when I am not feeling creative enough to dress beyond jeans and a black t-shirt, I wrap it around my waist and, suddenly, I'm a fashionista. What is this miraculous article of clothing, you ask? It's a simple square of fabric, about 3 foot by 3 foot, and it can transform any boring old outfit into an interesting, creative get-up. This piece of fabric that I utilize to an extreme is a simple, Indian-print cotton square. You don't have to head halfway across the world for this item, either. They are available all over Canal Street in New York City for a wild markup of about 1000%, and they're still only 10 bucks. For such a staple in my wardrobe, I would have paid even more. If Canal Street seems a world away and the weather has made you smitten with the East End all over again, you can find these scarves for sale at Mandala Boutique in Amagansett Square (267-6144). Or look online at www.getethical.com. This website promotes fair trade around the world, and has some beautiful scarves for sale.

Now that you've gotten the scarf, you may wonder how exactly to make use of it. To turn the scarf into a headwrap, you have a few choices. You could roll it up and then wrap it around your head like a headband, tying it below the hairline. This is a nice way to keep your hair back, but I find it often doesn't work for those of us with pin straight hair, because it makes a lump in the back of the head. Also, regardless of the texture of your hair, it may make your ears stick out. What I do instead is quite simple: take your square of fabric and fold it diagonally in half, so it's the shape of a triangle. Take the hypotenuse of the triangle (remember geometry?) and line it up with your eyebrow line. Then wrap the two opposite ends around your head, over the tips of your ears if you must, and tie them over your hair. This style still manages to hold back your hair, but it doesn't make your ears stick out! Plus, it covers up your head more than the thinner style, protecting you more from the sun as well as shielding an unkempt head!

If you're using the scarf as a belt, I have two methods, very much the same as the methods for the head. You can snake the fabric through your belt loops and tie in a knot on your hip. Or, to show off the pretty patterns of the fabric, return to that triangle and relocate the hypotenuse. Line up the hypotenuse with your waistline and tie it in a knot on the side. Then the triangle part of the fabric wraps around your hips – very hip.

I am going to regale you with one more option for the hipster scarf, and after that, you'll have to flex your own creative muscles. Now that the sun is shining bright and casting a golden light on your shoulders, you have to be conscious of what kind of rays you're catching. If you decide to dine outside, it's great to have a shirt that allows for a smooth tan. Return to the diagonal fold. Grab hold of that hypotenuse. Line it up so it's parallel to your shoulders, and wrap the scarf under your armpits, tying in the back. A triangle shape falls over your belly, and your shoulders and collarbone are exposed to the sun. Lovely.

So if you're looking for a new summer wardrobe but your wallet is begging you to be kind, consider a beautiful piece of versatile fabric. Depending on how creative you get with it, it could round out your summer wardrobe in one fell swoop.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

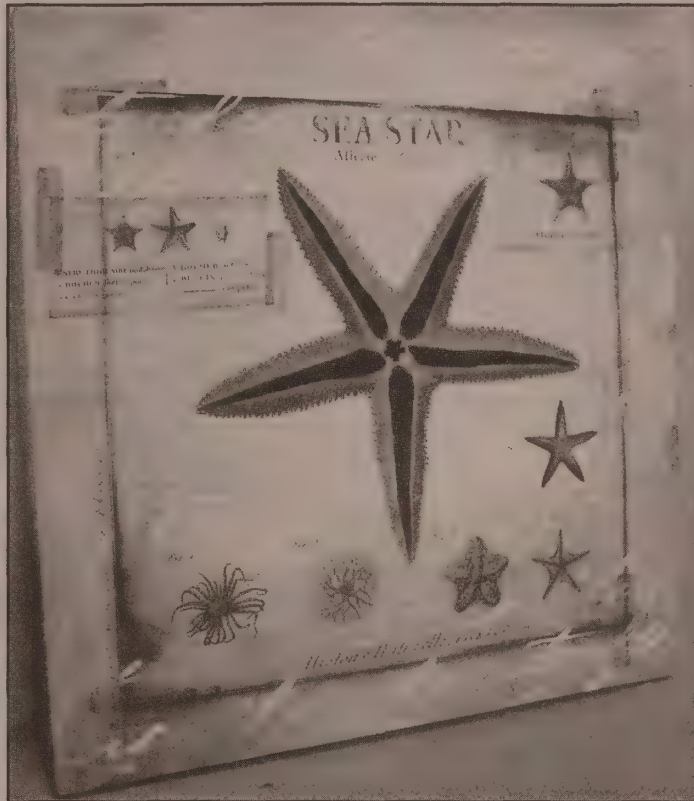

Mother's Day is here and the wisteria and lilacs are starting to bloom.....All my children and grandchildren are coming out on Sunday, so mom can make their favorite dinner, lasagna.....It's a wonderful holiday to get together with family before the mad rush on Memorial Day weekend. So enjoy your special day.....I will!

On that note, Pennington Flowers on Hampton Road in Southampton is also celebrating by "honoring all moms" with a floral or plant creation to delight the eye, warm her heart and enhance the home. Specials for Mom features beautiful and unique centerpieces with colorful birds, monarch butterflies, and wheat grass stylized in a 10 x 4 glass cylinder that is designed to last for several weeks and be prominently displayed during your Mother's Day dinner. The price is $89, and for all Mother's Day orders they are providing free delivery and sweets.

For more great ideas for every mom, including you, Casa Chic, 27 Hampton Road in Southampton, is having a special "Red Dot Sale" with lots of items reduced from 10% to 50% off - price tags of reduced items have one or more red dots; each representing a 10% discount in order to make room for new inventoryLook for all sorts of furniture including an upholstered sectional sofa at 50% off, sets of two occasional chairs, French country buffet in rich woods, bookcases, an oval chandelier in brass, lamps sold in pairs priced for one, prints by Robert Longstreet, pillows, and lots of accessories. This sale will run until the end of May. However, the early bird always catches the worm.....

There are some great gift ideas for everyone at Waterstone Pottery on Mariner Drive, off Montauk Highway in Southampton, where they are having a 20% off sale on all the terracotta planters. Also look for great deals on unusual glazed, metal, cement and fiberglass planters for your home, deck and patio.

Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street in Southampton is all geared up for Mom's favorite things. Some of the Mother's Day gift ideas include salt air fragrances; hanging chimes with environmental oil by Crabtree and Evelyn ($18); 100%

cotton robes by House Inc. ($85); jeweled pill boxes by Spring Street ($34); jeweled photo frames from Ashleigh Manor (starting at $24.95); Soy aromatherapy candles in lavender, orange/ginger and jasmine by Zinnia $24.95; and 100% linen pajama sets by Pine Cone Hill ($112). I love the very special locally made Dragonfly Soy Candles bringing "the outdoors in." They come in eight fragrances, in mason jars and travel tins and are not to be missed.

For great gift ideas for gardening moms, stop at C. Whitmore Gardens on Montauk Highway in Amagansett for a wide variety of Mother's Day gift giving that will fit every budget. Among all the beautiful florals, there is a large selection of indoor and outdoor pots and urns, in ceramic, terracotta, glass and metal, a wide variety of vases in many shapes, styles and materials, gardening shoes, hats, gloves, and state of the art ergonomic gardening tools. The floral arrangements come in every size and type, as well as gorgeous orchids, houseplants, and flowering indoor azaleas.

At Williams-Sonoma in the Bridgehampton Commons there are special gifts for mom (and me) to choose from. If she has a taste for the delicious simplicity of warm Italian paninis and other melted cheese sandwiches, the Krups Panini Press ($99.95) is the ideal gift. She'll use it again and again to grill restaurant-style sandwiches as well as chicken breasts, chops, burgers and more (recipe book is included). How about the Spring Violet Essential Oil Collection ($8.50 to $39.50), a Farmer's Market Wreath ($99), or a bundt cake keeper ($22)? There are plenty of gifts to choose from, some at very affordable prices.....

If Mom loves the "Coastal Cottage" look, head straight to Broken Colour Works, at the corner of Bay and Division Streets in Sag Harbor for a wonderful assortment of home décor items that will surely put a smile on her face. You can choose from tableware to wall art, linens to lighting, furniture and decorative accessories. For something different, owner Shannon Willy can create a special design on furniture, or treat Mom to an interior design project that will transform her walls or floors with a decorative mural or pattern. The ideas are endless here.

The Whalebone Store on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor is all prettied up for Mother's Day, and filled to the rafters with all kinds of unique gifts for every mom out there. There is also a nice selection of greeting and gift cards available. The Flower Garden is packed with fresh potted and hanging plants, all ready to go.....so get going!

A healthy and happy Mom's Day to all my readers.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID: EMILY TURNS FIVE

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP
FROM KATLEAN DE
MONCHY AND DAVID
POST

I was so excited on my birthday, I got up when it was still dark and everyone was still sleeping. I played in my room for a while until Dad came in and said "Emily it's only 6 a.m." But it was the day of my party and I was just too excited. All day we ran around getting last minute things. Mom was cooking for the guests and Dad went to get all the balloons from the balloon store. We saw him as we came out of the supermarket and he looked like he was going to be blown away – right out of a movie. Mom set up my room as the crafts room for the kids to make and decorate wizard hats. The adults were in the living room. The kids from school, and from the Hamptons, had fun but soon we heard the special words from Dad: "Magic Al is here." We moved into a makeshift theater in the dining room where Al did his tricks and made us all laugh so loud. I was his assistant! After the show, we all had food, juice, and cake. Mom was worried that the kids would stain the fancy carpet. Well, the carpet did get stained but it was the PARENTS who did it. After the guests left, I opened my presents and I got so many cool things. I'm a Junior scientist, spin artist, bead maker, veterinarian, artist and other things. What a great day, and now I have the chance to tell you all about it.

Soon our column moves to the Hamptons for the season. Events you want to tell us about – in Hamptons or NYC? Email david@nextpert.com

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

It's a special card, it's breakfast in bed, it's a gorgeous floral bouquet – it's Mother's Day. And it's a small way to payback all those days of "Mom" food that sustain us.

While Mother's Day is perhaps the most popular dining out day of the year (according to statistics), there is nothing like giving the chance to cook breakfast for mom.

From six to sixty, anyone at any cooking level can handle bread dipped into beaten eggs, sautéed to a golden crisp, then topped with fresh berries. A small culinary step forward can produce a simple pancake batter laden with blueberries, puffing on the griddle, then topped with a cascade of maple syrup. A bit more challenging may be Eggs Benedict, the classic brunch dish with Canadian bacon on English muffins and unconscionably coated with a rich hollandaise sauce – a dish to dream about. Yet, I would be delighted with Smoked Salmon Benedict on brioche toast – and if anyone's listening – pour on the hollandaise. Have a Happy Mother's Day.

FRENCH TOAST

French Toast can be made on the run or given a little advance preparation allowing the bread slices to dry out well to properly absorb the batter.

Serves 6-7

1 loaf challah or brioche, ends removed
3 large eggs
1 cup milk, 1, 2% or whole
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 tablespoon dark rum, optional
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon sugar mixed with 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon (cinnamon sugar)
Pure maple syrup and berries

1. Cut the loaf into 1/2-inch thick slices and allow to dry up to 24 hours on a baking sheet.

2. In a bowl large enough to soak the slices whisk together eggs, milk, vanilla and rum (if using). Soak 2 slices at a time for 3-4 minutes, turn the slices and soak for another 3-4 minutes.

Meanwhile melt 1 1/2 tablespoons butter in a large, heavy skillet over medium heat. When hot, cook 2 slices at a time, in one layer, for 2 minutes on each side or until golden brown. Transfer to a baking sheet as they are done and keep warm in a 180-degree oven. Cook remaining slices in additional butter until all are done. Sprinkle with cinnamon sugar, syrup and berries and serve.

BLUEBERRY BUTTERMILK PANCAKES

Store-bought pancake mix still requires the addition of milk, egg and oil. With just a bit more effort you have the makings of the ultimate pancakes from scratch.

Yield 10 – 5-inch pancakes

2 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs, beaten
2 cups buttermilk
4 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups fresh blueberries, rinsed
Pure Maple syrup

1. In a large bowl whisk together the flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt. Make a well and put in the beaten eggs and buttermilk. Whisk the mixture until the dry ingredients are thoroughly incorporated into the batter. Whisk in 3 tablespoons melted butter; there will be some lumps but they will come out in the cooking.

2. Heat a large cast-iron skillet or griddle over medium heat until hot enough to sizzle a drop of water. Put about 1 teaspoon melted butter in the skillet, then ladle a scant half-cup batter into the skillet or griddle. Adjust heat to medium low and scatter several berries onto the uncooked side. Cook until small bubbles appear on the surface and the edges appear to be setting, about 2 minutes. Turn and cook until golden brown on the other side, about 1 1/2 minutes longer. Repeat with remaining batter, adding a bit more melted butter as necessary. Transfer pancakes to a baking sheet as they are done and keep warm in a 180-degree oven. Serve with maple syrup.

SMOKED SALMON BENEDICT

Rich, but worth it! The classic hollandaise is easily made in a food processor.

Serves 4

For the Hollandaise

3 egg yolks
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
Dash cayenne pepper
1 stick (8 tablespoons) unsalted butter

For the poached eggs

1 teaspoon distilled white vinegar
4 extra-large eggs
Toasted brioche slices or English muffins

To Assemble

8 large smoked salmon slices

1. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and cayenne in workbowl of a food processor. Pulse machine for several seconds. Melt butter to a rapid boil in a small saucepan. With processor machine running, pour hot bubbling butter through feed tube in a slow steady stream until sauce has thickened. The sauce may be kept warm in the top of a double boiler over barely simmering heat.

2. Fill a deep, wide skillet with water. Add vinegar and bring to a boil. Adjust heat to maintain a brisk simmer, swirl the back of a spoon over water's surface and slide an egg into the created well. Continue to swirl the spoon around the egg and cook until the white is firm and the yolk runny. Repeat with remaining eggs, transfer to paper towels as they are done and trim any scraggly edges.

3. To assemble: place 2 salmon slices over toasted brioche or muffin. Carefully place a poached egg over the salmon and ladle over hollandaise sauce. Serve at once.

Dining in the Hamptons

East By Northeast is stupendous and you should make a reservation there right now. It is impossible not to like and will blow your taste buds away. The food at East By Northeast in Montauk is so unique, so inspiring and so delicious you get to a point where you just get excited thinking about the restaurant once you have dined there. The chefs are artists, the wait staff are sleek and professional and the view of Lake Montauk seen from the entire restaurant should have songs written about it.

Doron Wong, the executive chef at East By Northeast, is brilliant. His art is his food and his food is his passion. Each dish has so many flavorful combinations of spices and food that you are simply forced to respect the man's work. East By Northeast is not just a dining experience, it is an experience of art, of nature's beauty and a time spent with warm and caring people, which not only include the staff of the restaurant, but many of the Montauk locals that dine there. Owners Bruce Bernacchia, Angelo Liberatore, and John Erb are fortunate to have him because the food he presents truly is like nothing else.

After my guest and I ordered some hot sake and admired the spiritually soothing view of the water, we ordered our appetizers from our delightful waitress. The tuna tartare came out on a Japanese plate and was served with a blend of avocado purée, Osetra caviar and Hawaiian ginger vinaigrette. The appetizer was easily enough for the two of us to share, but didn't stop us from enjoying the steamed shrimp dumplings presented in a charming Japanese wooden bowl that releases steam when it's opened. The angry mustard sauce that accompanies this dish is delicious. The dish comes out with 12 dumplings, a generous portion while at the same time being very healthy.

My mind was curious as to what this chef could do with a piece of salmon and sea bass after seeing the creative and unique aspects of these dishes. We clapped our hands when the waitress came out with our entrées. We smiled as we looked at the fantastic presentation of the food. I almost wanted to show the plates to other diners in the restaurant. I wanted to say, "Can you believe this? I mean just look at how great this looks."

Our waitress was smiling as well, gaining pleasure out of watching us be happy. The salmon was cooked to perfection and came out with chilled soba noodles and madras curry pickled vegetables, which were freshly sliced vegetables with a sweet flavor. The fresh pan seared local Montauk striped bass was sensational. The dish comes out with double smoked bacon, leek fried rice and tomato miso vinaigrette, which is absolutely fantastic. The bacon in the rice was incredible. Both dishes were very large and were more than enough to fill us up.

We were full, but dessert was next. The extensive dessert menu had us debating on the best dessert to share and we decided to order the crème brulee, which was a really fun dish. It comes out with five different flavored crème brulees each in an individual sake cup. We enjoyed trying to figure out which flavor was which. There was espresso, vanilla, chocolate, ginger and amaretto. Unique and delicious, that pretty much sums up this jewel in Montauk.

It should be said that they have a wonderful prix-fixe menu served nightly, Tuesday through Saturday between 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. and on Sunday from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. for a three-course meal for just $25.95. This is one of the best deals going.

If you haven't been to East By Northeast yet, you don't know what you are missing. It is so worth the trip to Montauk it is not even funny. Get out there and try this restaurant, then go back again. It is a perfect, charming, wonderful place that will soothe your soul and enlighten your senses.

East By Northeast is open 7 days a week Monday-Saturday at 5:30 p.m. and at 5 p.m. on Sunday. They are located at 51 Edgemere Street in Montauk. Call for reservations at 631-668-2872.

Cook Your Heart Out, Outside

Although I have always been a fan of charcoal grills for the flavor they impart and the lovely tradition of starting the fire, there is something appealing about having a grand, built-in gas grill with all the bells and whistles. This is especially true in the Hamptons, where top-of-the-line kitchens are the norm. It borders on the tragic to leave a kitchen filled with Sub Zero, Vikings and Bosch appliances only to arrive at some beat up old kettle grill. Wars have been fought over less, and people just shouldn't have to live like that. Fortunately, they do not have to.

These days, high-end gas grills offer it all. Consider the Viking line. The 53-inch ultra premium grill features 25,000-btu gas burners, as well as a 15,000-btu infrared rotisserie burner. Of course, the rotisserie burner is accompanied by a rotisserie motor and rotisserie rod. There is also a separate 15,000-btu side burner and a cast-iron, non-stick griddle. And of course, the grill comes with a removable smoker system.

But if that is not enough to coax you out of your wondrous kitchen, you may have to consider the outdoor Viking Range. With all the features of the 53-inch gas grill, it also comes with a 20,000-btu, 2.5-cubic-foot gas oven. The oven comes with three racks that can be placed in four positions. The downside: the oven takes up some of the space that would otherwise be used for storage of your second set of cookware and dishes, but you can always buy additional storage units.

Of course, if you are trying to create a true rival for your indoor kitchen, then you will need to give your Viking range the perfect partner – the Viking outdoor hood. The outdoor hood serves two critical functions. It brings to mind your indoor stove, creating a professional looking ensemble. It also makes sure that smoke does not rise merely up and away from the grill but rather up and away from the hood over the grill.

And there is more. Viking offers a 24-inch "beverage center," which is a fancy name for a refrigerator. With 6.1 cubic feet of space, the beverage center features three regular shelves and two wine shelves. (If your outdoor area is not large enough to accommodate the 53-inch grill and 24-inch beverage center, rest assured that you may buy a 15-inch beverage center and 41-inch grill, but your neighbors will mock you.)

I know what you are thinking. What is the point of having a beverage center without an ice machine? An insightful question, indeed. Fortunately, Viking makes a 15-inch ice machine, which produces up to 35 pounds of ice every 24 hours. As an added bonus: old ice on the bottom of the container will melt away, so that all 35 pounds of ice will be fresh. And the ice machine comes with a heavy-duty ice scoop. Viking omits no detail.

Yet, even with the 53-inch grill, the 24-inch beverage center and the 15-inch icemaker, you still feel incomplete. That is why Viking also sells a refrigerated beverage dispenser. This 24-inch unit accommodates a half-barrel of the beverage of your choice, and contains a tap on top. This way, your guests may have the option of drinking bottled beer from the regular beverage center or beer on tap from the dispenser.

There is only one problem. Viking does not make an outdoor dishwasher, perhaps because no one has suggested a proper name for it. (I propose, "dish cleansing center.") But don't let this stop you. A good plumber can certainly run the necessary pipes underground to allow you to use Viking's ultra-premium dishwasher outside. And as long as you are doing that, you might as well have an outdoor sink installed as well.

Needless to say, your nearly twelve feet of appliances, as well as your sink and plenty of stainless steel storage units must be built in, as it is quite disconcerting to have so many units, strewn about as though one lived in Arkansas. Brick is de rigueur, for it is such a handsome way to frame your perfect outdoor kitchen, and it is not likely to burst into flame when exposed to the many tens of thousands of btus feeding the grill's burners. Indeed, it is for this very reason that plywood framing draped in curtains is not recommended.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Ode to Colorful Frills

Summer on the East End would be less spectacular without one of the most popular annuals: the petunia. It is a mainstay of beach and woodland cottages. The petunia is among the most popular flowering annuals of all time. It is no wonder, since their bright, lively blooms are continuous from spring to frost and many types add a wonderful fragrance to the air. Not to mention these flowers are amazingly easy to grow. Petunias are versatile and useful in flowerbeds, hanging baskets, window boxes, and other types of containers. They make good cut flowers, and come in many colors with petal edges that are either straight or ruffled.

There are two general classes of petunia: Grandiflora and Multiflora. Grandiflora petunias have fewer, but larger, flowers, and are suitable for hanging baskets, window boxes and other planters because of their cascading tendency. Multiflora petunias are more compact and have smaller, more numerous blooms. These plants are a little more resilient than their cousins and can withstand stronger winds and rains better than the Grandifloras. Both classes of petunia come in single and double-flowered varieties.

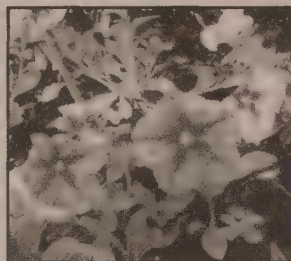

The modern petunia is far from what first appeared in 19th century gardens with its inconspicuous flowers. Petunias evolved from two species discovered in South America in the mid 1700s and early 1800s. The name "petunia" actually comes from the Brazilian word "petun" which means tobacco. Petunias belong to the Solanaceae family of plants that includes the nightshades (like tomatoes and peppers). There are some 40 species.

Breeders in Germany and England are mostly responsible for development of the modern garden petunia, which is referred to as Petunia x hybrida. Japanese breeders at the beginning of the 20th century are credited with the substantial development that has resulted in the large-flowered and double species we know today. Changes and improvements continue every year.

When purchasing petunias at garden centers or nurseries, select plants with clean, green foliage. Avoid plants with dried, spotted leaves, and those that seem leggy. Make sure plants have buds and flowers. Select colors that will enhance your landscape design (we are particularly fond of the dark, purple flowers, though they sometimes fade into the landscape). Do not be turned off by the fact that petunias have sticky leaf surfaces. This is not an indication of disease, but a feature of the plants themselves.

Petunias perform best in full sun, though they will tolerate part shade. In less sun, the stems will be leggier and there will be fewer flowers. For this reason, it is best to select a garden site that receives six or more hours of sun each day. If you are planting petunias in window boxes, remember that overhanging eaves produce some shade and may affect flowering.

Prepare the soil by working in some organic matter to a depth of about eight inches below the surface. This will improve drainage and increase the ability of the soil to hold moisture and nutrients. You can also work in a balanced fertilizer (we like a time-released starter fertilizer; always use organic fertilizers).

Carefully situate each plant at the same depth it was growing in its containers. Avoid disturbing the roots or soil as you transplant the seedlings. It might be a good idea to pinch back any leggy stems at this time, and to water the plants well to prevent wilting. Space plants eight to ten inches apart. For containers and window boxes, plant a little closer together. Mulch around the plants to keep soil from adhering to the sticky surfaces of the leaves. Plant petunias on a cloudy day, if at all possible, to shield the plants from wilting and shock.

While petunias tolerate some drought, keeping the soil moist produces the best displays over time. However, do not allow the soil around plants to remain excessively wet. This will stunt growth and produce yellow leaves.

If you notice your plants sending out leaves and no flowers, reduce the amount of fertilizer. If leaves are yellowing, add some iron or iron sulphate to the soil. Pinch back the ends of stems to increase the number of flowering stems and to discourage excessive vegetative growth. Deadhead old flowers and seedpods to increase the number of blooms. Beginning mid-July, use a liquid fertilizer every three weeks or so to encourage additional blooming.

Petunias are a wonderful garden plant for the summer landscape. Their lively colors and wonderful fragrance ought to be a part of every summer garden.

Dan's HOME Guide

As a young boy, I can remember my next-door neighbors hard at work building a tree house in their backyard. They worked on it for several days and when it was finished all I could think of was how I was going to get into it. Actually, I'm glad I didn't, because the first summer storm tore the thing to pieces and that was the end of that. Poor planning led to its inevitable failure.

If you have the time, money, and inspiration to build a tree house then I'd like to offer a word of advice: plan carefully. For information on the actual construction and materials you'll need to build one, it's best to speak to a carpenter or someone who has actually built a tree house. My purpose here is to give you a brief idea of some things you will need to consider before you begin building. Okay, let's start.

You should begin by selecting a tree that has large, strongly connected limbs on the lower part of the stem. You will have to prune away branches, sprouts and twigs that, when weighed with rain and propelled by winds, will not slash sideways or up and down into the area of a tree house. You should make proper pruning cuts to remove branches. Do not use pruning paints on any wounds.

Tree houses should be designed to rest upon major branches and to nestle around the trunk. Remember trees bend and twist in the wind, so simply jamming or wedging boards between branches or into crotches will not work. Use rope to make certain a tree house stays snug against a branch. All rope attachment hardware should be on the tree house, not screwed into the tree. Attaching a tree house to tree branches with rope can prevent large windstorms from blowing a tree house away.

Depending upon how a tree house will be attached and positioned in the tree, you will need to wrap the main stem and basal portions of major branches with layers of corrugated cardboard held with snug, not tight, wire. This cardboard cover should not be attached where there will be need of hand and foot holds. Cardboard will help protect the bark during tree house installation and general play on the tree.

You must consider how children will enter the tree house. Do not nail individual ladder rungs to the trunk for climbing. Instead, utilize a self-supporting ladder tied to the tree, or a heavy, un-looped, knotted rope for entering the tree. Remember that most in-tree injuries occur when climbing up and down. For many trees with low branches, a ladder or rope for entry is unneeded and represents a safety concern.

You will have to determine how high off the ground to build a tree house. For most, any height above the ground represents the thrill of a tree house. Build a tree house for easy and safe access, not to maximize height above the ground. Three to five feet above the ground in a tree with low, reclining branches can be easy to construct and to maintain. Tree houses that are built higher up have a tendency to be less stable overall and are more difficult to enter.

Within the tree, tree houses should be built in the bottom one-third of the tree. You should determine the total height of the tree, divide by three and keep the tree house structure in the lowest third of the tree. If attachments are needed, attach the tree house only to the branches, not the trunk. Position the tree house so it rests or is attached to the basal one-third of each branch.

Wooden materials should be used in building a tree house. Wood is "soft" on the tree and children, is strong for its weight, and withstands bending and mechanical shocks.

These are just a few points to consider when planning construction of a tree house.

Keep in mind that tree houses may be for kids, but require adult construction and supervision for safe play and for minimizing damage to the tree. Tree houses are inherently dangerous and require careful maintenance, but tree houses can be fun, educational, and challenging.

Remember also that tree houses should be temporary, seasonal structures that are removed each year. This allows a tree time for adjustment, and a parent time to check and repair the tree house. Use new, synthetic, heavy rope for reattachment each year.

Dan's HOME Guide

The Coolest Thing in Town

On a sweltering summer night without air conditioning, the romance of an old home can go right out the window. Conventional central air-conditioning system installations require ductwork, and often mean sacrificing original woodwork, decorative plasterwork, walls and ceilings. Window or through-the-wall units are noisy and mar a home's appearance.

How can you add today's comfort without compromising turn of the century charm?

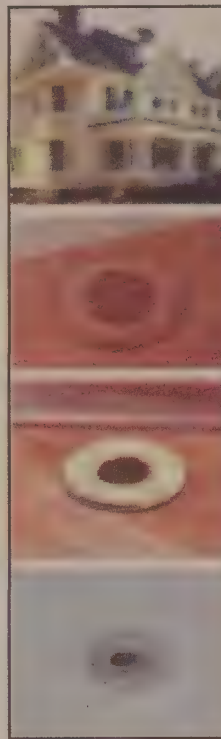

Flexible Duct Central Air Systems, such as the SpacePak line of high-velocity central cooling systems, were developed especially for homes without already-existing sheet metal ductwork or the usable space required. Rather than using large, square outlets and bulky metal ductwork, flexible duct employs a miniaturized system that ensures a subtle and unobtrusive installation.

Flexible duct is a unique central cooling and heating system designed for simplified installation in residential or commercial properties where a conventional system isn't practical or desirable. They are ideal for "ductless" homes, older homes with limited space or historic properties where architectural details must be preserved. It's also ideal for homes with outdated hot water baseboards, steam radiators, electric or radiant heat. In addition, these systems enable homeowners to heat and cool without compromising today's popular open floor plans or a house's architectural integrity. For winter warming, the system can be heated through a hot water coil, electric coil or heat pump, thereby allowing homeowners to maintain the home's beautiful ornamental woodwork and regain valuable space formerly occuried by old baseboard or radiator heating systems. The system uses small-diameter flexible ducts, which can be threaded between floor or ceiling joists, inside closets and walls much like electrical wiring. This method utilizes just 1/10 the space of conventional central air ductwork and is preferable to the larger sheet metal ducts that can require major structural carpentry and could alter the appearance of a home. A quiet blower unit, small enough to fit inside an attic, basement or crawl space, runs the system. The fan coil and condensing units can be hidden beneath an enclosed stairwell, in the attic, under porches, or behind a bookcase, bushes or chimney.

Small air outlets are the only visible components of these flexible duct systems. They are about the size of a CD with only a 2" inner diameter. Standard outlets can be installed in the ceiling, walls or floors and can be painted or wallpapered to match the room's décor. Custom outlets are available that virtually disappear into a home's wood flooring and deliver warmed or cooled air without drafts.

These outlets supply conditioned air to the home using a principle known as aspiration (the movement of air by suction). As a high-velocity stream of air is sent into the room, it pushes through the air already there and creates a small suction around itself. This causes all room air to move into the stream – and does it so gently that no one ever feels any draft.

Flexible duct systems are also highly-efficient, and remove up to 30 percent more humidity than conventional central air conditioning. This proves to be invaluable in the preservation of art, antiques, libraries, fabrics and furniture. Lower humidity can result in lower energy bills. When the humidity is lower, you feel cool and comfortable even at a higher thermostat setting, which means you use less energy.

Flexible Duct Systems have been installed in numerous historic homes throughout the United States. They are also a perfect choice for new home construction, since they complement in-floor radiant heat and allow architectural design flexibility.

In addition, the SpacePak brand of Flexible Duct Systems was chosen to be installed in Bob Vila's EnergyWise House in Palm Springs, CA – a 3,200 square-foot, multi-level home showcasing energy-efficient design ideas, high-performance building materials and environmental-ally-sound products that outperform traditional building products in any building or remodeling project.

Dan's HOME Guide

Being Coy With Koi

There is a wide array of types of ponds, and, before beginning construction of one in your own yard, it would be best to do some research. Two of the most common types are koi ponds and water gardens. Koi are fancy Japanese carp and require an enclosed fresh water home and re-circulating water in addition to a fairly large amount of space – no less than 1000 gallons and a depth of at least three feet.

Water gardens don't necessarily need to be as large – a depth of two feet will normally be suitable for the goldfish and aquatic plants that reside there. However, a water garden in a colder climate, like winter time here in the Hamptons, will require more depth – at least one foot of water below the freeze zone to give the fish ample space beneath the ice.

Choose a location. Often times, being able to see the pond from a back window or deck is ideal, and a more visual spot will tend to encourage more attention. Fertilizers and chemicals from your lawn and garden will damage your pond so be sure that runoff from rain will not flow into your pond; you may need to actually alter the terrain to insure that it remains untainted. Also, stay away from trees. Falling leaves, sticks, and other debris will require you to be vigilant about keeping the pond clean and balanced. Also, if you plan to grow water lilies, your pond will need its fair share of direct sun – at least 4 to 6 hours. Too much shade is only okay for fish-only ponds.

An easy way to mark off the location of where you plan to build your pond is by using rope or a hose to mark the space on the ground. Look at the markings from a window in your house or from another vantage point to ensure ideal visibility. Be sure to give the pond enough space and don't be afraid to build a larger pond – smaller ones are actually more difficult to maintain as they tend to be less "stable" and will limit the number of fish that can comfortably live there.

Calculate the size of the liner you will need by measuring the width, height, and depth of your planned pond and be sure to give two extra feet for overlap. Some people choose to use concrete instead of a liner. This is a personal choice based on aesthetics and cost. A concrete base will last upwards of fifty years, whereas a typical liner will be satisfactory for ten to fifteen. More expensive grades of fishpond liners last up to thirty years.

When digging your pond, try to maintain a shelf around the perimeter that is one foot deep and one (or more) feet wide. Also, dig a ditch for any plumbing you will have – external filters, a pond skimmer, or re-circulating devices. Add several inches of sand to the area at the very bottom of your soon-to-be-pond to provide space for drainage beneath the liner. Before adding your liner, remove rocks and other items that could cause a tear. Also try to keep wrinkles and folds to a minimum, but remember that when you add water, some of the smaller ones will smooth out and disappear. Leaving the liner in the sun for a few hours will soften it enough to make it relatively easy to work with.

After you are content with the liner's placement, arrange stone or other materials around the water's edge to serve both as a border and to secure the liner in place. Your decision on whether or not to mortar the stones should be based on the size and weight of the stones and how close you predict visitors will be standing to the pond; mortar the stones if you have any fear of them being disturbed.

When filling the pond, stop two or three inches from the ground surface. Before adding any fish or plants – de-chlorinate your water. Once water is pure, add your plants as soon as possible. Fish, however, are a slower process – add a few at a time over a period of several weeks to prevent radically altering the bacteria levels.

Choosing plants for your pond is a decision based on aesthetics and biology. Choose plants that you enjoy and that will help limit the amount of algae (Anacharis is a top choice) and plants that your fish will feed on.

Water lilies and surface plants should never cover more than one third of the surface area – they will prevent sunlight from reaching the plants.

Once finished, sit back and enjoy your pond and the serenity that it inspires.

Dan's HOME Guide

Tomatohampton

When Mother's Day rolls around, I never know what to give my mom. Everything seems so trivial, so small, when compared with life itself. That's why I've been thinking that the best thing to give my mother is, in fact, life. Now, I don't mean I am going to run out and get knocked-up to thank my mom for all the gifts she's bestowed on me. Somehow I don't think that would fully repay the debt of gratitude I owe her. But instead, I am going to give her the gift that keeps on giving: the gift of a garden.

Mother's Day weekend is the perfect time to get out into the garden and turn the place into a veritable Eden. The heavy rains of April have given way to May's sunshine, so those plants that need more moderate moisture will be able to take hold. Also, what better way to spend some good quality time with Mom than out under the sun? There you have the freedom to chat the day away or just put in some manual labor to show her your gratitude.

A fabulous gift for Mom is one that incorporates something that will last with quality time together. Working in the garden is one of the most therapeutic things you can do. Just to be that in touch with the earth is spiritual. Many hardworking moms don't make the time to tend to a garden, but if there was already a garden to tend to, you can be sure she wouldn't just let it die. By helping her start her own vegetable garden, you can help your mom enrich her life greatly.

Since the time is right for planting tomatoes, now would be the perfect time to plant a tomato patch together. Then, the plants will grow and bloom for months to come, and your gift will always be a reminder of the lovely Mother's Day you had together. These luscious fruits, dressed as vegetables, will bear fruit straight through to autumn. Each time she slices a juicy tomato she will think of her sensitive offspring who decided to do more than pick up some cut flowers at the store. Her child thought so much of her that he/she wanted to spend the whole day together.

And let me repeat – this gift will last you clear into fall!

To get your mother's tomato patch well on its way, work the earth with a tiller and add compost, creating a rich soil. Create beds that are about 5 feet wide, and as long as you want, depending on the number of tomato plants you want to grow. Transplant seedlings two feet apart from one another. Place a trellis system beside the seedlings so that when they grow, they'll have something to cling to. This is important for tomatoes. Once your mom is satisfied with the dirt patch you have just so kindly bestowed upon her, kiss her goodbye and be ready to answer the phone for the next few weeks. The tomato plants need to be watered close to their stalks in the early weeks of growth but after that, you can leave a hose nearby to give them a deeper soak, once in a while. Don't put the hose right on top of the tomato bed, as that will encourage disease and weed growth. By leaving the hose nearby the tomatoes, the water will reach the deep root system that has developed. By over-watering the tomato plants, you may create tomatoes with less flavor.

In addition to all the assets of having a vegetable garden, starting one up is a healthy endeavor. If your mom hates exercising but loves being in shape, tending to a garden is a sneaky way to get her exercising. There's a lot of bending, lifting, and stretching that is involved in gardening. But when it is such a visible, tangible goal, it's much easier to get your body moving.

Too often we spend holidays lazing around and overeating. This is fun, but in the end, it doesn't make us feel rested or good. Mother's Day is a time to celebrate the abundance of what your mom has given you in the past, and to prepare for a future full of happy times. Investing in a garden is a great way to acknowledge that abundance.

The People Among My Plants

Mid-May is the time when gardeners start sowing seeds, setting out hardy annuals, making changes in layout, adding specimen plants, and generally getting ready for the season ahead.

I do all that, too, but this is also the time when I re-populate my garden with the statuary I seem to have acquired since I arrived here on the East End. No, not garishly colored gnomes, or life-sized deer, or valuable sculpture from famed artists, just little gray resin or stone figures, mostly of children, that make me smile and feel in good company. Friends gift me, I purchase, I rescue, and then I find homes among the shrubs, flowers and vegetables for the little garden family to live.

The first statue was from the late-lamented Frank's Garden Centers; a gray resin head with such a startled expression that it made me laugh. He usually sits under the zucchini and looks as alarmed as I usually am at the rate with which he is overtaken.

At the same time I saw a giant frog, also gray resin, about a foot long, with a most benevolent expression, and I decided he would look just right in among the sedums, so there he sits, patient and kindly. He stays out all winter, looking out for the dried Autumn Joy. Three smaller frogs sit on a bench looking like the three monkeys of hear, see, and speak no evil fame—they are out by the bamboo.

Since I was a librarian before I retired, and spent some years in the Children's Room, I thought characters from children's books might be appropriate. A favorite outfit of mine, Collections (www.collection-setc.com), offers their whole catalog for under $14.99, my kind of pricing, and there I found Alice in Wonderland conversing with the White Rabbit, and put them out by the ferns. The Frog Prince and the Princess came next. I decided they had not met yet as I wanted them in different parts of the garden. The Tortoise and the Hare play Tic-Tac-Toe on their stone board with turtle and rabbit pieces. I keep them on the deck so grandchildren can join the game. That was pretty much the end of the book theme. But not the end of the children. (Another great source is www.windandweather.com.) There is Pietro, so named because I think he is an Italian peasant lad. I rescued him from someone who did not fully appreciate his charms, and when part of his floppy peasant hat got broken off at her house I whisked him off to my black-eyed Susans, where he sits peacefully cross-legged, holding a bowl of sunflowers seeds.

Willowy Beatrice, of the Botticelli face, also offers sunflower seeds, holding them in her outstretched apron with such a sweet, welcoming expression you have to smile. Beatrice had a grave accident during a windstorm, and was decapitated, but Dr. Elmer's seems to have fixed her up good as new.

Ardis came later, and sits on her bench holding her small child with his head on her lap, seeming to sing a lullaby there under the holly and the ivy. Another latecomer was Logan, so named because he looks so exactly like one of the grandkids that it was inevitable. He lies on his stomach, holding a frog he has caught, and was supposed to be placed next to the pond, but the pond has not yet materialized (and may never), so he has to be content with coralbells and astilbe.

Out by the daylilies sits chubby little Mary, reading her picture book. She was to be part of the library book-themed collection that never quite filled out, but she seems happy there in the sun. She has a brother, but he usually lives on my desk, also reading a book while he lies on his tummy, head on hand.

Maybe I will put him out this summer, too – under the Solomon seal, perhaps? He does look wise.

And then, the piece de resistance, which, when I received it as a gift all I could think was – what in the world will I do with it?? Four children, each about a foot tall, standing in a row, on a beach maybe 18" long. After long pondering, I put them out in the garden between two oak saplings, spread some white stones from the real beach (gathered of course by enthusiastic grands) in front of them, and realized they were delightful; mischievous, lively, and obviously great friends having a wonderful time. I loved them. I gathered some grands and asked, what do you think they should they be named? And in a breath-taking burst of creativity and perfect choices, the four children were christened, from right to left in the photo, Mary Margaret Marigold, Sour Green apple, Rosey Blue, and Robin Corntassle. Can you think of anything better for children in the garden?

I keep telling myself that I have more than enough little people in the yard, any more would make things look even sillier. I am not that kind of person, people are starting to laugh – but on the other hand, I did see something last week in a catalog, so cute.....

I Spy

Many people attribute the invention of the telescope to Galileo, but the actual inventor was Hans Lippershey, a Dutch eyeglass maker. As the story goes, around the year 1600, two children were messing about in his spectacle shop and held two lenses in a row. When they looked through they noticed that objects appeared larger. Lippershey took this general principle to the next step, by setting two lenses at a fixed distance away from each other. "The Looker," as he titled it, was neither initially accepted by the general public, nor the Dutch government. In fact, when Lippershey tried to market it to the army, he was turned down. The rest of the world wouldn't be so nearsighted, though. The news of the invention spread to France in less than a year and eventually to Italy, where Galileo was commissioned to "invent" one. He did so, and then proceeded to discover the four moons of Jupiter and craters of the Earth's moon, and disproved the geocentric concept of our universe. This final discovery landed him in jail and secured him the title of heretic by the Catholic Church (until his pardon 300 years later).

The next great step forward in telescopes came by way of Sir Isaac Newton. Newton's experimentation with telescopes led to the application of parabolic mirrors in order to harness the light from the outside world, focusing it onto a second, flat mirror, which reflected into an eyepiece. The greatest advantage to this design was that it created smaller, lighter telescopes with the same strength of the traditional telescopes of his day.

Today you don't have to be a scientist to know about telescopes. You don't even have to build one yourself (although many people still do). All you need to know are a few basic facts and you are well on your way to enjoying the spring sky.

There are currently three telescopes on the market designed for the "amateur" astronomer. Please do not let the word "amateur" allow you to believe that these telescopes are toys because with prices in the thousands, these instruments ensure that stargazing isn't a kid's game. That said, stargazing is a wonderful event for the whole family.

Altered in appearance and strength from when Hans Lippershey invented it more than 400 years ago, the Refractive Telescope is still based on the same principle – the lining up of two lenses. It's a pretty basic idea, which most people learned about in high school. Light passes through the larger front lens and is focused on the secondary lens (the eyepiece). That's about it. These telescopes are generally looked down upon because there are so many terrible, inexpensive versions on the market. A quality refractive telescope works quite well, although they are generally larger and more cumbersome than the next type.

The Newtonian Reflector Telescope, as mentioned earlier, harnesses light by bouncing it off of a parabolic mirror. Since Newton's time the greatest advancement in this type of telescope was the creation of machine grinders, which can create almost perfectly rounded mirrors to harness the outside light. These are great for deep sky objects because, in general, they capture greater amounts of light than the refractive telescopes. You will sometimes see them called Dobsonian Telescopes, but they are more or less the same.

The third telescope on the market is the Catadioptric Telescope. These break down into two different versions, the Schmidt-Cassegrain and the Maksutov-Cassegrain. They both resemble the Newtonian style, although they are a combination of both lenses and mirrors. Light passes through a correcting lens, hits a concave mirror and then is reflected up to a second mirror toward the front of the telescope, only to have the image reflected back down the tube into an eyepiece at the rear of the telescope. The Schmidt and Maksutov telescopes work in similar ways, the major difference being that the Schmidt-Cassegrain has a thin correcting lens and the Maksutov has a thicker one.

The right telescope for you depends on your intentions. The Catadioptric Telescopes are really the best of all worlds and for backyard stargazing they really make sense, although they aren't as aesthetically pleasing as those brass refracting telescopes you find in nautical and home stores. If you're looking for a decoration for the house, which can double as a telescope, then maybe the refracting telescope is right for you. Just be careful what you look at; otherwise you just may join Galileo in prison.

Spot of Tea?

It's noontime on a gorgeous spring day and your daughter is playing with her dolls while sitting on a blanket under the trees. You notice her mimicking your actions and movements and laugh as she pretends to serve her dolls tea with her pinky finger sticking out. "It's time for a tea party, Mommy," she says smiling up to you and you think to yourself, "What a great idea."

The concept of drinking tea has been around since 2737 B.C. when Emperor Shen Nong was visiting a far away region in his land. He and his court stopped for a while and for hygienic reasons, they boiled the water. Dried leaves fell into the liquid and when the emperor tasted it, he proclaimed that it had quite an interesting, refreshing taste. Thus tea was born. The Chinese culture loved tea so much that they passed the idea on to Japan. The Japanese culture embraced drinking tea as an art form and incorporated it into ceremonies. Soon the Europeans began drinking tea and between 1534 and 1652 tea found its way to England. English tea gardens developed and the concept of drinking tea became a wonderful event, filled with dressing up, flowers, and orchestras. It was quite an event, bathed in tradition and is often still practiced today.

So, when you decide to have a tea party, it cannot be taken lightly. It's a fun event for children of all ages (yes, even boys will enjoy it). The first step in having a tea party is to ensure that you have the right atmosphere for the event. Your backyard or porch will do just fine. Bring out the CD player and play some soft instrumental music to set the mood. If you had planned in advance, your child would have sent out invitations to their friends. These are quite easy to hand-make yourself. Take blank stationery cards and draw a teacup. Have your children decorate the teacup image with markers, stickers and glitter. Fill the time, date and place in the middle. Decorate the envelopes with teapot stickers, then place them in the mail. Your guests will be excited to come to your gathering.

Party stores sell tea-themed plates, cups and tablecloths. Have your child set the table with napkins, plates and cups, all arranged neatly and formally. This is a wonderful time to teach your child how to set a proper place setting. Arrange some fresh cut flowers in the middle for a beautiful effect. If you'd like the children to do a craft at the tea party, you'll need something quick, easy and neat – as they are all apt to be dressed up. A fun activity is to make teapot magnets. Get the pre-cut craft foam and a strip of magnet tape. Let the children have fun creating a souvenir from the day.

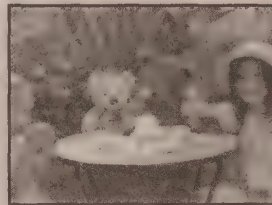

Now, what to serve. Tea, of course. But what kind of tea would children like? The following recipe is from "A Whimsical Children's Tea Party." It's a delicious vanilla tea that's light and child friendly.

Vanilla Milk Tea

Makes 4-5 servings

Ingredients

- 1 cup milk
- 2 tsp. vanilla extract
- 4 tsp. decaf black or green tea (or 4 tea bags)

1 quart boiling water

1. Pour the milk into a saucepan, add the vanilla, and bring to a simmer, stirring often. Remove the pan from the heat and let it stand until the milk is cool.

2. Place the tea leaves in a teapot and add the boiling water. Cover with a towel and steep 5 minutes. Pour about 1/4 cup of the cooled milk into the teacups. Stir and strain the tea into the cups.

Along with the tea, it is fun to have finger sandwiches. While you think children will not like cucumber sandwiches, you might be surprised. Mix a few in with some old favorites like cream cheese and jelly, turkey and cheese, and peanut butter and jelly. Cookies are a wonderful dessert and a must for any good tea party. Lemon cookies, sugar cookies, and shortbread all go well with tea.

After eating and drinking the children will be in the mood for some fun games. Croquet is a wonderful game for the children to play while dressed up, as are horseshoes. If they are calm after this point and able to sit, you might want to read them a story. Spread a blanket on the lawn and gather the group together to relax. The combination of the soothing tea, delicious light lunch and classical music should make for a quiet, happy group.

Having a tea party is a wonderful way to spend a summer afternoon and a chance for your child to be "just like Mommy."

A Perfect Setting

The ultimate destination for landscape design in the Hamptons, the new Bridgehampton headquarters of Unlimited Earth Care, is complete and open for business. Gifted landscape designer Frederico Azevedo, who has received international acclaim for the careful attention to detail and well-informed eclecticism of his numerous garden installations, has created a new headquarters to showcase these talents in his office and showroom in a dramatically converted service station at the junction of Scuttle Hole Road and the Bridgehampton/Sag Harbor Turnpike.

Mr. Azevedo selected architect Peter Wilson to redesign and reinterpret the long-vacant service station which, though prominently located, had over the decades fallen into advanced disrepair. The transformation has been nothing short of miraculous. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Azevedo designed the renovated building to resemble an updated version of a 19th century barn. To achieve this effect, the exterior walls were covered with white washed cedar planks and the roof was rebuilt with a steep slope topped with an open cupola and then entirely sheathed in metal. To add an updated element to the exterior, the front façade was set off with two matching nine-foot-wide windows framing outdoor reflecting fountains. The overall look is dramatic yet also very much in harmony with the unassuming and rustic feel of the surrounding area. The addition of large arborvitae, evergreen hedges and seasonal plantings add the final grace notes to the dynamic exterior.

Upon entering the building, attention is immediately drawn to the sweeping scale of the main showroom, located to the left of the entrance. The interior space was designed by Mr. Azevedo in two parts – in addition to the expansive showroom, the first floor is occupied by an office and drafting room. The showroom features a double-height ceiling in the Scandinavian style, covered in stained planks which echo the design of the building's exterior walls. On the second floor are Mr. Azevedo's private office and a conference room. The office overlooks the showroom through a large glass gallery window which also helps to infuse the upper-floor with bright light. Through this gallery, visitors can view the state-of-the-art video installation located in the showroom below, featuring a film produced by video artist Tamako Okamura about the career and projects of Mr. Azevedo.

Unlimited Earth Care Showroom

For the design of the interior and furnishings, Mr.

Azevedo turned to East Hampton designer and stylist Michael Weisman of Insideout Design. Mr. Weisman shares Mr. Azevedo's aesthetic – an eclectic mixture of the ultramodern and the rustic "Hamptons" style, accented with touches of whimsy – an aesthetic that Mr. Weisman put to extensive use in the design and product mix featured at Insideout of East Hampton, his long-running and popular shop which Mr. Weisman recently closed in order to devote his full-time attention to his design, styling and staging projects.

At Unlimited Earth Care, Mr. Weisman realized Mr. Azevedo's vision of combining the rustic with the ultramodern, applying the same philosophy to the interior as Mr. Azevedo applies to his garden and landscape designs. Form, texture, scale, color, and lines interact in harmony, and every detail is integral, not superfluous. Through Mr. Azevedo's international travels and lifelong experience, he has developed an appreciation for clean lines and bold styles in furnishings and accessories, which led Mr. Weisman to furnish the space with pieces from Phillipe Starck, Charles Eames and Norman Foster, custom-pieces from Italian designer Orietta d'Armi, and Venetian glass chandeliers. The ultramodern furnishings perfectly offset the rustic details featured in the interior, including stained and polished concrete floors downstairs and upstairs and walls covered in antique barn lumber.

Everything in Its Place

Clutter sneaks up. It seems like you wake up one day and you're surrounded by it. There are the old clothes you don't wear, but might. There is the crock-pot you never used, but might. There are the broken appliances you never repaired, but might. It seems like this happens over night, but it doesn't. It takes place slowly, over time. We don't notice it happening. Before we know it, we are moving clutter only to make space for new clutter. All of a sudden clutter has taken control.

How does this happen? Most of us are collectors. We find it hard to throw things out, even if they are broken, never used, or no longer fit. Add to this the lifestyle of today's family; we are working longer hours and struggling to find time to enjoy our hobbies and interests. Our children's days are busy with school-work, soccer and piano. More to do, more things, less time.

What is the answer? Home organization is the key to allowing us to enjoy our busy lives. Organization makes daily life more enjoyable and less stressful. How much time is wasted looking for that favorite belt, basketball, or the wrapping paper you were saving? How much money is wasted purchasing things we already have somewhere in the bottom of our closet or in the back of our garage? Home organization saves time and money. When you have a place to store or hang the items you use, life becomes less stressful. You don't need to worry about finding the things you need every day or even once a year. More organization means less stress. In determining where to begin, look at your individual family's lifestyle.

Houses are growing larger as the families who live there grow smaller. We are replacing people with stuff. Storage space has kept pace with the growing size of the American home, so extra room isn't the problem or the solution.

Closets, pantries, laundry areas, and home offices are common areas in our homes where clutter can take over. When designing a master closet, consider how much space is needed for tall and short hanging clothes, shoes, and folded clothing. Accessories such as hutches, jewelry trays, tie racks, and storage bins ensure that everything stored can be easily seen and is easily accessible. Small children's closets can include triple-hanging systems that can easily be converted to double-hanging as the child grows. Storage bins for toys and built-in hampers are popular accessories. Pantries can be transformed using built-in wine racks, pull outs, and baskets. Laundry areas can enjoy a folding area and built-in ironing board.

Then there is the garage. The garage is very often the family's biggest dumping ground. The average garage accounts for 15 to 20 percent of a home's total square footage. This is an enormous amount of space to be lost to clutter. An organized garage can turn a source of frustration into an area the whole family can enjoy. Planning is the key to turning your garage into a space that meets your family's needs.

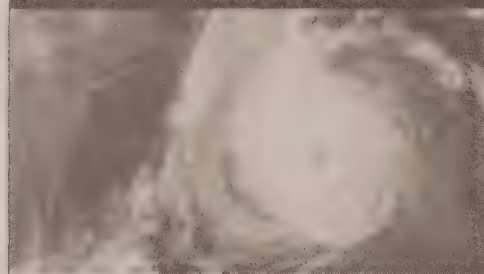

Garage storage is divided into different zones or areas. These should include a "transition area" (if your garage is attached) to allow for entry into the main house. The transition area includes a place to hang coats, remove boots, and place groceries while unlocking the door. An "overflow/pantry area" allows for storage of items you buy in bulk, such as paper towels, dog food, soda. A "large item area" is a storage area for bulky supplies or equipment that are not needed frequently (camping gear, holiday decorations). An area for "long and tall storage" houses brooms, rakes, and other yard work tools. Sports equipment, such as bikes, balls, and nets are housed in "activity centers." Finally, "passion centers" are reserved for the specific hobbies your family enjoys most. Passion centers may include a woodworking area or a gardening center.

Working with a professional ensures the ideal selection, design, and installation needed to transform your garage into a comfortable space that fits your family's lifestyle.

Home organization may seem like an overwhelming challenge, but it is a key to simplifying our busy lives. Working with a professional can turn this challenge into a liberating experience that will simplify and enhance your entire family's lifestyle.

Protection for Hamptons Castles

---Homeowner's insurance is under attack. Many insurance carriers have either stopped writing coverage for new policies, or have severely limited both their coverage and where they will insure. Our home, our most valuable personal asset, may not be fully protected.

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM

Hurricane activity in the US has increased dramatically. Statistics from the National Climate Data Center and the National Hurricane Center are shocking: 2005 was the most violent year on record: 27 named storms of which 15 were hurricanes, and 4 reached category 5 status for the first time. Except for 1933 no season exceeded 19 named storms.

The big three for 2005 Katrina, Rita and Wilma lead the others, which in total took over 1000 lives and billions in insured and uninsured losses. Beginning with Katrina in August, over $100 billion in total and $34 billion in insured losses, Rita in September over $10 billion in Total and $4.7 billion in insured losses, and Wilma in October caused $12 billion total and $6 billion insured losses. This activity came after the devastating hurricane season of 2004 including Charley, Ivan, and Francis. Prior to this were Hurricane Andrew in 1992 and Hugo in 1989 resulting in billions in losses.

WHO'S IN WHO'S OUT

With the institution of home insurance at peril, some insurers have exited the market.

Recently Allstate, which has 25% of the New York State market, has announced that it will no longer issue policies – although they say they will renew existing ones. Many other carriers have carefully carved out those geographic areas that have a higher risk, especially near water. Chubb, usually a fine policy (the “masterpiece”), is currently not accepting new policies in Suffolk.

However, three exceptional carriers, AIG, Fireman's Fund and Lexington, not only are remaining in the market, but have designed ultra-deluxe policies providing coverage that Hamptons castles deserve and need. One will even cover WATERFRONT homes.

COVERAGE FOR HAMPTONS CASTLES – POLICY DETAILS

These three insurers, AIG, Fireman's Fund and Lexington, are offering deluxe coverage that not only protect property, but protect the lifestyle of many Hamptonsites.

When a loss occurs, it is the details of the policy's coverage that often determines whether insufficient, adequate or exceptional reimbursements occur.

For example the AIG policy, issued from its Private Client Group, will cover high-value homes at replacement cost (without depreciation) including rebuilding the home if necessary. It also covers art collections, antiques, jewelry, vintage wine worldwide, and includes appraisals. It even provides excess flood coverage (explained below).

Additional endorsements from these exceptional policies can include increased landscaping coverage, increased home based business property, earthquake coverage, increased temporary living expenses, damages during restorations, property remediation for escaped fuel, limited mold, fungus, wet/dry rot, etc. Liability coverage is an important part of the homeowner's policy and coverage should include excess liability limits up to $100 million to assure that lawsuits are not catastrophic.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE

These policies will provide coverage for water damage from various causes. A flood is officially defined by NFIP as “.....inundation of normally dry land areas from overflow of inland or tidal waters or.....unusual and rapid accumulation or runoff of surface water.” Lexington, AIG and others also provide coverage above (excess) the low limits of the NFIP. They also offer coverage for water damage due to water backup from sewers and drains and sump overflow.

Policies differ as to how they cover homes either on the waterfront or within one mile of the water. For example, Fireman's Fund and AIG will assign different deductibles depending how close to the water the property is, but may require information on the elevation of the home. Lexington covers all homes regardless of proximity to the water.

One policy states that properties more than one mile from these waters have no hurricane or wind deductible. But, if the home is less than one mile from an ocean, bay or sound and is on the North Shore of Suffolk or the South Shore of Nassau one policy includes a hurricane deductible of $25,000 and if on the South Shore of Suffolk it is $50,000. In contrast, Lexington will cover all waterfront homes with a flat 5% deductible for damage from wind and hail.

In addition, some carriers require that they insure the primary home if they are insuring the weekend home.

PROTECT THE HAMPTONS LIFESTYLE

To fully protect the Hamptons lifestyle some policies will include high-value automobiles, including collector cars, at an agreed value, yachts-cruising worldwide, private jets, kidnap and ransom, workers' comp for domestic staff, and for the “family office” it can provide errors and omissions, directors and officers and employment practices liability.

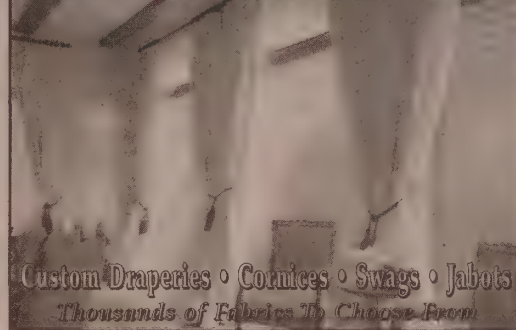

COVER YOUR ASSETS

In summary, there are solutions to this home insurance crisis. Properly designed, there are insurance policies available that will protect our most valuable asset – our home.

The Heated Debate About Pools

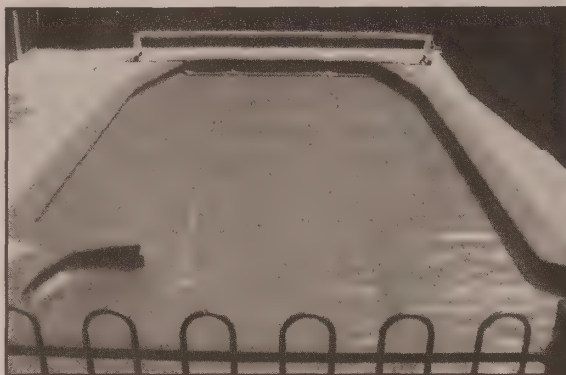

Summer is fast approaching, and like many people who own their own backyard pool you're looking forward to enjoying a nice swim with family and friends. Or perhaps you use your pool for exercise or even physical therapy. Whatever the reason, the fact is that most times the water is just too cold to enjoy without heating it. Heating your pool will allow you to enjoy it all season, perhaps all year, thereby increasing the return on your sizable investment.

There are three basic types of pool heating systems: Solar, Electric Heat Pump, and Gas (Natural or Lp/Propane). Deciding which system is best for you and your pool is determined by numerous factors including your needs, desires, budget and physical layout of the pool and house. All three types of pool heaters can be installed by a handyman, although it is strongly recommended that electric and gas hookups be made by a professional contractor. The typical installation will require 1 to 2 days for solar, less than 1 day for heat pumps, and about half a day for gas.

So what heating system is the best for you? I will briefly discuss three types below to provide you with an overview.

Solar pool heaters are best for recreational pool use and are recommended for those who are comfortable with pool temperatures ranging from the low to mid 80s. Solar works year-round in southern climates, and extends the swimming season in northern climates. There may be periods during inclement weather that the pool is too cool to use; however, several sunny days will bring the pool back to a comfortable temperature. Proper sizing is critical for good performance.

Solar heaters work by utilizing the sun's free heat and do not have an operating cost. Your existing pool pump circulates the water through the heater, usually located on the roof, and warms the pool. The pump timer is set to operate during sunlight hours, usually 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A quality solar heater will typically last 10 to 20 years. They are very low maintenance. Most systems have a 10-year warranty on the panels.

For those folks who enjoy swimming regardless of the weather, a heat pump is the recommended method. It is also the preferred method for therapy or athletic training, and also when a home is not "solar feasible" (i.e., solar will not fit on a roof.) A heat pump, when properly sized, can maintain any desired pool temperature between 80 and 90 degrees, regardless of outside weather conditions. It will work when the outside air temperature is above 45 degrees.

A heat pump uses electricity to operate, and is actually a form of solar heater, as the sun-warmed air contributes to the efficiency of these units. This heat is extracted from the air, upgraded with a compressor, and then transferred to the water. Heat pumps will last between 5 and 10 years or more, depending on the quality. Because heat pumps are a mechanical device with many moving and electrical parts, they require periodic service by a qualified A/C technician. Warranties range from 1 to 10 years on parts and/or labor.

Gas pool heaters are best for heating pools for short periods of time. They are effective, but expensive to operate, and are ideal for quickly heating the pool when guests or children are visiting, or for a second home where the pool is not heated on a regular basis. Gas heaters are generally over-sized and can easily maintain any desired temperature regardless of the weather. They can also serve as an ideal heater or backup heater for a spa.

Gas heaters use natural or propane fuel. The gas is burned in a combustion chamber where the heat is transferred to the pool water. Operation requires a storage tank for propane gas, or hookup to natural gas, where available. These units typically last 5 years or more. Due to the high operating temperature inside a gas heater, maintenance may be more frequent, and major repairs can be costly. Warranties range from 1 to 5 years, usually only on parts.

Keep in mind that a thermal pool cover is recommended for all heating systems. Heating a pool without a cover is like heating a house without a roof...the heat just goes right out the top. Without a pool cover, the cost of operating a heat pump or gas heater is doubled, and a solar heater's effectiveness is dramatically decreased.

Reap the Benefits of a Sustainable Harvest

It was a sweaty day in the Costa Rican rainforest, and a colorful chalkboard advertising "Mango shakes" beckoned from the window of a cozy-looking café. I walked inside, and was immediately surrounded by dark wood. From the walls and the beams to the tables and the chairs, from the napkin holders to the rotund bowls, everything was wood. At first, I wasn't sure how I felt about it. Granted, the deep, lush wood was beautiful, but I had just spent a solid month of work replanting the trees that had been brutally cleared from the rainforest. How could the café at the clearing in the woods have been such a perpetrator, capitalizing on one of the few remaining rainforests of the world? But when I walked over to a particularly appealing wooden chest and looked at the tag, I learned that this wood was harvested using sustainable methods.

Wood is one of the best building materials there is, which is why it is in such high demand. It is beautiful and durable. But with the rapid loss of forests around the world, it seems difficult for a conscientious environmentalist to rationalize its employment. However, sustainable harvesting is a growing enterprise that values both the utility of wood products and the importance of protecting our forests.

At the Earth Summit in Rio in 1992, many countries gathered together to discuss the environmental concerns of this planet. One resulting coalition was the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC). The FSC is an international body that sets standards for sustainable forestry around the world. The FSC sets ten basic principles for sustainable harvesting, including considerations of environmental, cultural, and economic impact. For example, the sixth principle sets forth that "Forest management shall conserve biological diversity and its associated values, water resources, soils, and unique and fragile ecosystems and landscapes, and, by so doing, maintain the ecological functions and the integrity of the forest." Simple practices like replanting a tree for every tree chopped down are some of the methods employed in sustainable harvesting. Find out the other principles at www.fscus.org.

Wood that is certified by the FSC as sustainable thus upholds the vital ecosystems of worldwide forests, and you can decorate your home without a trace of guilt.

You can find these sustainable materials by looking for the FSC logo. They are available at major retailers like the Home Depot, Lowe's, and Kinko's as well as smaller, environmentally aware outlets. Smartwood, a division of the Rainforest Alliance, is another certifier that audits products to improve forest management. Smartwood uses the principles of the FSC to deem a forest sustainable.

You can decorate your house entirely with sustainable harvested wood. From the floor beams right on up, there are plenty of opportunities to use an ecologically friendly approach. Log on to www.earthfriendlygoods.com to check out a variety of wood furnishings and accent pieces. They offer a sustainable bedroom set, including a bed-frame in any size from twin to king. The prices range from $884 for a twin to $1,164 for a king. It really doesn't cost much more than a wooden bed made from harvested wood, and it has the simple, quiet beauty of light wood. This online store has everything from dressers to CD towers, from dining room chairs to wooden floor lamps, and they are all made from wood that doesn't disrupt the ecosystems in the world's forests.

One of the reasons wood is so appealing as a decorating material is that it seems to bring the outside into your home. Wood has an earthy quality. It makes us feel connected to our environment, and that is a soothing feeling. While stainless steel and ceramic tiles have their attractions, wood has an inherent hominess that the other materials lack. But if it is the organic appeal of wood that draws you to it, isn't it contradictory to be harming the environment by using it? There are options that permit you to have your cake and eat it too, by using wood harvested with sustainable methods, which are in harmony with the environment.

A Room of One's Own

What makes the act of creation possible? The answer was simple, according to Virginia Wolfe: Four walls and a door that locks. A room of one's own. But not everyone can enjoy this proverbial room. It's a crowded world – a hard place to get some writing done.

James Joyce wrote on Dublin's benches and in busy bedrooms. I have seen my co-workers bust out clever pieces in mad dashes, while answering their phones and eating berries, stoically ignoring beeps, rings, intercoms and incessant chatter. This is not the case for me, unless jumbled sentences and inarticulate rants are my goal. My mind needs space to marinate and wander, just like a field is needed for soccer.

What would Emily Dickinson be without the starchy charm of New England in a whitewashed bedroom? Would Hemingway's sentences have been so slow and deliberate without six-toed cats, the windy palms and the stormy turquoise waters of Key West?

With creative havens in mind, I decided to create my own space, at least on paper. What would my room look like?

I choose dark wood floors and table lamps and avoid wall-to-wall carpeting at all costs. High ceilings and wrap around windows are essential and I keep a black dog around. I love bookshelves; dark, heavy rows, stacked with those beloved books worn and scribbled on, the ones without covers or frayed at their spines.

Now I choose furniture with life worn into it, overstuffed and comfortable, like somebody's past-prime living room – perhaps from the antique sale this August or shipped from Morocco. And miscellaneous lamps that could have come from a garage sale, with real incandescent light bulbs. And plenty of coffee in my writer's haven.

Let there be a window; I rely on distraction. Windows fuel curiosity. You get to see the world through a frame. I keep it open, even when it's cold. (I believe that Camus said the tiny window in his jail cell was enough to write about for the rest of his life. Or maybe that was Dostoevsky?) Forget TV. Besides a computer, keep out screens and mirrors. Once I worked in a room with a broken television set from the 60s and ended up staring at the blank screen for hours. Mirrors make me remember myself too often. If you have the time, try a typewriter. I find they force you to be deliberate.

If you live among the others, find a quiet corner or hidden rooftop for a few minutes. In a communal space, erect a visual boundary – perhaps a gauzy curtain hung from the ceiling or a folding screen. People are less likely to ask you dumb (or very relevant) questions if they can't see you. If you can't be alone, fool yourself.

Some like to store up possible inspiration. I would have Egon Shiele or Nan Goldin books, family albums, magazines open to an arbitrary page and construct a poem by pointing to words at random.

The fine line between clutter and lived-in is easy to lose sight of in a workspace. Some like to keep sentimental or inspiring things around – from quotes on the wall to a hung piece of driftwood – which might trigger some brave thought. Others prefer a blank wall, a closet to lock yourself in. How many masterpieces were written in a jail cell? Turn off the lights, close the door and you have your imagination left to look out of.

Truth is, you'll write in the dentist chair if you need it bad enough. The stories will find their way to the surface. Until then, find a window seat and a pencil. Faulkner wrote As I Lay Dying while working the night shift at a power plant.

Many writers find that having one location in which they work every day helps train their minds to get going, the equivalent of Pavlov's bell.

Old Virginia had a point about the door. It keeps the world out. But didn't she drown herself?

No matter how well decorated your walls or how long you spent in the stationery store, no muse will come if you stay inside. The best advice a teacher gave me was this:

Live better stories than you write.

Taking a Potter's Studio for a Spin

Whether it is painting, gardening, or making crafts, having an end product from your downtime is often tempting for those of us who like to see the fruits of our labor. Pottery making is one such activity, and, after its almost heyday during the late-1960s and early-1970s in America, it is beginning to make a comeback.

Right here in the Hamptons, there are classes, studios, galleries, and home kilns that populate our area and offer chances for all forms of artists to enjoy, from the beginner to the professional.

However, if you are ready to take the really big step, then you need to build your own pottery studio, committing to your craft and investing in both yourself and your artwork. Building a pottery studio may initially appear like a daunting task, but a little bit of research, including price shopping, plans for what sort of output you plan to create at home, and a realistic timetable for your date of completion make things significantly less stressful.

The two more expensive tools that most pottery studios will definitely require are a kiln and a wheel; both of those items range in price, size, and style.

You can get a decent wheel for as low as $350, but be prepared to spend in the range of $500-700 for a standard, traditional wheel. If you are a gadget lover and have the money to spend there is no reason why you can't drop upwards of $1500 on a deluxe, home studio wheel, but $1100 will get you a respectable higher end wheel, providing you with a capacity for 200 pounds of weight and two horsepower. But, don't be intimidated, a lower priced wheel can still offer you what you want. With 1/3 horsepower and a 25-pound capacity, a smaller wheel has the benefit of being portable and being smaller – something to take into account if space will be an issue. A wheel like this is better for someone working on smaller projects and possibly someone beginning the move towards being a more self-sufficient potter.

Next to look at would be the kiln. Kilns vary in power, temperature settings, size, heating method, and style. Some of these are a matter of choice, but other elements will really have an effect on your pottery.

You might also want to purchase a pug mill if you plan to use different clay bodies together in one piece; a pug mill mixes the clay by the use of two counter-rotating screw augers and pushes the clay through a three-inch pipe. This works to not only mix the clay, but also will remove air.

If you plan to use the slab-building process for pottery, whereby you, rather than throw the pottery on a wheel, build one piece on another, you will need to obtain a slab roller that will give your clay a consistent thickness throughout.

For wheel-thrown pottery, a variety of sponges are needed, to not only remove excess water from your piece, but also smooth the surface of your new artwork. This smooth surface will also be helpful in ensuring your finished product is strong; a consistent thickness makes your piece less likely to crack or break.

A variety of cutting tools, knives, wire loops and ribbons, texture tools, and brushes will be important things to have around your studio as well. Trimming your pottery before it is left to dry will be the next thing for you to do.

Baker racks are ideal for the next step – drying your pottery, and plastic shelves that enclose the pieces are also a helpful addition to your home studio.

After an initial visit to the kiln – for a secure drying, to ensure that all water has been removed, and to get rid of any other impurities, your pottery is ready for glaze to be applied. Sandpaper or a simple standard paring knife can help to remove any remaining small bumps on your piece and a quick wipe down with a sponge will remove dust before you apply a glaze.

After a second firing in your kiln, you will want to cool your finished product for at least twenty-four hours in the kiln itself before even opening the door. A quick rundown with more sandpaper and another wipe-down with a sponge or cloth material and your finished product is ready to be admired.

Having all of this equipment together in your own studio means convenience as well as a way of providing you with your very own “safe space” to escape the pressure of modern life for a few hours and make something beautiful. Enjoy!

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

As the season kicks off on the East End, Hamptons realtors have agreed that the market here is secure. And the high-end market is tight. Prices are not dropping but going up. There may only be few houses selling, but they are selling at astronomical prices, making the dollar sales steadily increase over the last year where they were higher than ever. The rentals this season are bringing in big numbers as well. Some went for record numbers, as high as $635,000 for the season. That is what it cost Russian heiress Anna Anismova to rent in Water Mill this summer, breaking the record she set two years ago when she rented the sprawling Swans Way in Southampton at $550,000. The Water Mill rental is the highest priced summer rental to date. The summer rental market is hot with renters coming out with big money to burn. Many East End realtors had already depleted their rental inventory by February, particularly their waterfronts. Realtors here have had one of the best rental seasons in years. And again, it is all happening in the high-end market.

In the past few months it is Meadow Lane in Southampton that has caused a stir, making news with first, the $26.5 million sale right on the ocean that listed at $31 million, then sold after just a few short months on the market in mid-winter. Now another Meadow Lane estate is on the market. But this one has the unbelievable price tag of $62.5 million, the highest in the area this season. Meadow Lane is one of the most prestigious addresses one can buy into here and this one is certainly no exception. It is situated between the ocean and bay on almost 9 acres. It was designed by Francis Fleetwood and has 8 bedrooms and 14 baths. There is a private putting green, 450' of private beach, a gunite pool, tennis court, and staff quarters. It is listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman.

There are a number of celebrities to add to the already long list residing here. Those flocking out this summer include J.K. Rowlings to Sagaponack and Katie Couric to Southampton.

Open land is extremely scarce and in high demand. Oceanfront land, in particular, commands top dollar and we have seen parcels sell for as much as twenty million. Builders scoop up whatever they can find and if substantial acreage goes up for sale there are buyers, mostly builders or developers, just chomping at the "bid." Large oceanfront parcels are, for the most part, non-existent. So with vacant land, we can still see bidding wars and watch the prices go up, up, up! There are two new exclusive residential development projects going up in the Hamptons right now, one in Bridgehampton and one in Sag Harbor, that will contain sizable homes with all the trimmings and buyers are just waiting for them to go onto the market. Most of them, of course will be sold during the building phase.

We have come to realize that the Hamptons real estate market is an entity all its own. Whatever we have heard out there about bubbles bursting, prices falling, properties not selling, or rentals not moving, is just not happening here. The East End real estate market opens the season healthy and strong. The business opportunities abound, sizable estates are changing hands, rentals are full and there are some of the highest priced listings available to ever hit the market. It is apparent that the East End is in for a very busy summer.

Mediterranean Health

As the sunny days of May usher tables to the sidewalks, I find myself craving light, healthy foods. In winter, the body seeks the warmth and moisture that is lacking in the air. Therefore, people generally end up eating hot, savory foods to compensate for the hounding bitter cold. As the seasons shift, so should the diet. You may have noticed your body craving different foods, and it's wise to heed these calls. If you haven't noticed such a shift in your culinary desires, try to tune in to your appetite. You will probably discover that you could actually be eating more appropriately for the season.

Yesterday, I stepped out into the May evening to meet a friend for dinner at a sidewalk café on the Lower East Side of Manhattan. As we settled into our seats, the menu's Mediterranean platter beckoned both of us. When I thought about it, though, I realized that I had been eating more humus and falafel in the past couple of weeks than I had eaten all winter. Coincidence? Perhaps, but since the weather has warmed to Mediterranean temperatures and the moisture in the air has increased, I think that my body is actually craving ingredients that complement the climate.

The weather on Friday, May 5, in Beirut, Lebanon (a hotbed of falafel consumption) looks like this: High of 70 degrees Fahrenheit, humidity at 56%, and air pressure of 30.01. In New York on that same day, there was a high of 72 degrees Fahrenheit, humidity of 50%, and air pressure of 29.81. My hypothesis is, therefore, that in a seasonal place such as New York, the diets shift with the seasons, and when our weather mimics that of the lovely Mediterranean, perhaps our diet should as well.

The Mediterranean region touches many different worlds. It peeks into Africa, kisses the coast of Spain, ducks through Italy and Greece, and washes up on the shores of the Middle East. While all of these regions vary greatly in terms of politics, religion, language, and culture, they do share certain ingredients that seem to be carried from port to port by the salty sea.

According to the Reader's Digest Mediterranean Cookbook, there are certain essential items that appear most often in any Mediterranean diet, from Morocco to Israel. There is an abundance of food derived from plant sources, like fruits, vegetables, potatoes, grains, beans, nuts and seeds. These ingredients are valued for being mostly unprocessed and fresh with the season.

While up to 40% of the calories in the Mediterranean diet are from fat, no more than 8% are from saturated fats. Therefore, there isn't the frightful deterrence from all fats that we experience in the United States, but simply a consumption of better fats. Honey is usually the natural sweetener used in desserts as opposed to our sweeter than sweet refined sugar, and fresh fruit is also a common dessert.

Specifically, the common ingredients in a Mediterranean diet include: olives, onions, garlic, tomatoes, fish, herbs, nuts, and seeds. Cheese is commonly derived from sheep or goat's milk, which is often not as heavily processed as cheese from cow's milk. Poultry is incorporated into recipes more often than red meat, which also helps keeps cholesterol levels low. Eating fish a few times per week benefits the Mediterraneans by increasing the amount of omega-3 fatty acids.

A Mediterranean diet pretty much excludes animal fats like butter, cream, and lard. Instead, Mediterranean chefs are constantly employing the use of olive oil. Because olive oil is a monounsaturated fatty acid, it doesn't have the alarming effect on cholesterol levels that saturated fats have. Olive oil is also a good source of antioxidants. Replacing butter with olive oil this spring is an excellent move for your health.

We are a product of our environment, and it is always best to eat the fresh, local foodstuffs of the season. Since the farms are now turning out their spring harvests, there's no better time to start eating locally. This spring, lay off the butter and the red meat. Opt for lighter, simpler choices like olive oil and fresh fish. Just as the Mediterraneans have the fresh bounty of their sea in their markets, we have springtime abundance from our own farms and waters. It's interesting to see, though, as the seasons shift, how our options for fresh foods begin to mirror the options in the perpetually moderate climates of the Mediterranean.

CORRECTION

In an article in the paper last week, we noted that products at Naturopathica Holistic Health in East Hampton are so natural that the ingredients for one particular product, a pumpkin enzyme scrub, when separated, would be edible and delicious. We want to amend that. MANY of the ingredients in the scrub are natural and edible. But others in the scrub are just to enhance the scrub and are not edible. Do not try to eat the Naturopathica Holistic Health Pumpkin Enzyme Scrub. We regret the error.

WINNING WORDS

Dear Dan,

I just had to write to tell you how thrilled I am that my slogan, "The Hamptons: Where The Sea Greets the Stars," won the contest!

I spoke to a lovely woman at Dan's who said she will send me my lunch gift certificate for Pierre's. I am looking forward to a delicious meal. I thank you for sponsoring this contest and look forward to enjoying my home in the Hamptons again soon (and of course, reading my weekly Dan's Paper)!

Thanks again.

BEAUTY IN THE EYE OF THE BEHOLDER

Dear Dan,

I enjoy your articles on the physical make up on the Hamptons area.

At the risk of being too specific, I ask: What is the worst looking structure in the Hamptons, and what structure epitomizes the Hamptons in a positive way?

Jim Fleming

The best is "Home Sweet Home" in East Hampton. I don't dare choose the worst. Maybe any 7-Eleven. -DR

Dear Dan,

I was excited to see the review on Gail Storm when I opened your paper this weekend. Then I looked at the picture. Who are these guys, I thought? And where is Gail? Debbie Tuma did a bang up review on Gail. Gail will be pleased when she reads it. The entire article was about her. Fitting as it is her band, and it was her first live recorded CD, but alas not a one picture of her. Debbie even mentioned Gail's "seductive expressions, quirky face, etc." A picture was missing here though. Surely one could have been taken and accompanied the review.

I can send you one from Gail's first CD, which came out a few years ago. It's a beauty. But I couldn't help but think that it was odd that an article on Gail Storm's band showed a picture of two guys in her band and none of her. People that know her in Montauk will be disappointed.

Thanks for the time.
Nanci LaGarenne

PS: I'm sure the picture of Gail on her first CD is available through her website too.

Dear Dan,

Hope you're well. Former intern/Montauk Pioneer managing editor Jesse Scaccia here. I hope you'd be proud to know that I formed a production company and we have a six part documentary series airing on BET, Thursday nights at 9:30. You should check it out.

Dear Dan,

In the May 5th Issue of your paper Janet Berg featured an article about "Mothering Sunday." As a Hamptons newspaper I would expect that you would spell the towns in the Hamptons correctly.

Please remember for next time that it is Remsenburg, not Remsenberg.

Thank you.

GREEN HOUSE?

Dear Dan,

I visit Bridgehampton often throughout the year and have a question about a building there. I was wondering if you knew anything about it.

The building in question is a gorgeous but run-down house at 2539 Montauk Highway. It is a gorgeous house in obvious need of repair. I searched online and it looks like it is in the National Register of Historic Homes and is owned by someone named Nathaniel Rogers.

It seems amazing to me that such a beautiful building in such a valuable real estate market would just sit idle. And seeing that you're the expert for everything Bridgehampton related, I thought you might have some insight.

Just a curious reader,
Danielle Arceneaux

The town bought it and is in the process of restoring it as a park. -DR

Police Blotter

Breaking Into An Empty House

A man was arrested in Sag Harbor after he was seen trying to break into an abandoned house. Police questioned the motives of the man, who told them that he was interested in squatting at the house for the next fifteen years and then gaining legal ownership.

Stolen Sandals

A woman in Bridgehampton was charged with petit larceny after she was caught trying to return a pair of sandals that she had just picked up from inside the store. She also tried to steal three packages of Ghirardelli chocolates by hiding them under a bag in her shopping cart. The woman was also caught with underwear that she put on inside the store and tried to walk out with, as well as a bra. She was also caught trying to return a box of Preparation H that she had taken from the store.

Stolen Video Games

A man in Southampton reported to police that somebody stole his Xbox 360 video game system as well as some video games that were valued at an estimated $660. Police questioned the man about the new Godfather video game by asking him, "Is that a sweet game? Or is it overrated?"

Trees Stolen

A woman reported to police in North Sea that somebody stole three cypress trees that she recently planted in her front yard. The trees were worth $240. Police told the woman that without water and without soil, the trees don't have much time to live. They said it did appear that they were looking at a tree murder and not just a kidnapping here.

A woman in Sag Harbor reported to police that loud music was coming out of a nightclub in Sag Harbor. Police then asked the woman, "Does it look like it is worth going? Or should we check out some other spots before settling in on that one?"

* * *

Open House Signs

Somebody stole three open house signs in Montauk, which was reported by a Montauk realtor to police. The houses have been on the market for the past eight years and are listed for nine-million dollars.

THANK YOU

Dear Dan,

RE: Rabbi David Gelfand

After reading your recent article discussing the controversy surrounding Rabbi David Gelfand, we feel compelled to write about our own personal experience with the Rabbi.

Though not members of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, we attended services at the synagogue every Saturday for two years (1999 to 2001). It was very rare that we missed a Saturday morning service. While we are not particularly religious people, there were circumstances that made us turn toward religion as a place to seek comfort.

Our 28-year-old son, Michael, was diagnosed with stage four colon cancer in June of 1999. Needless to say we were devastated and numb. Not knowing what to do for him or where to turn, we turned to God and to prayer.

Cantor Stein and Rabbi Gelfand helped us cope during that time – when we felt that none of us would be able to endure what was happening. The Rabbi's eloquent and moving sermons gave us strength and hopefulness. They enabled us, as parents, to set the mood and environment for our other two children and for Michael as well. We looked forward to these sermons every week. It seemed as if Rabbi Gelfand was speaking directly to us. He gave us the hope we needed to move forward.

Michael passed away August 19, 2001. Rabbi Gelfand and Cantor Stein were both made aware of Michael's passing, called us, separately, to convey their condolences. They knew us only as two people that attended services every week. We became familiar faces. And, as religious leaders they were there to offer comfort and support.

We are very private people – uncomfortable sharing our lives with others. However, we feel compelled to speak out in support of the Rabbi – a religious leader who gave us such hope and comfort. I am confident that we are not the only people that he has touched in this way. We are very unhappy to see a man, who has given so much consolation to those in need, be so publicly ridiculed.

Stolen Tools

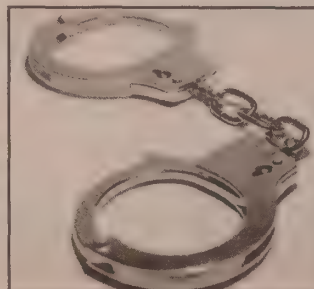

A man in Amagansett reported to police that somebody stole his tools, valued at $700, from a closet in a house that he was building. The man has told police that he can no longer finish building the house.

The Bathroom Capers

A woman in East Hampton reported to police that somebody stole four rolls of toilet paper, razors, a bottle of Advil, a box of garbage bags, dish soap, laundry detergent and a jar of coins from her house. She also reported a stolen matchbook, two olives, a Bic pen, three toothpicks, three tissues, four raisins, a salad fork and the most shocking of all, two squirts of hand moisturizer.

OUR HOUSE WOULD BE PERFECT...IF ONLY...

Here is how our Major Home Renovation Loan works:

- The loan is based on the value of your home AFTER the renovations are finished. This gives you the flexibility to make your home into more than you could with just your current home equity.
- During construction, the loan is a line of credit with interest-only payments due on the outstanding balance. When the renovations are complete, the loan converts to a conventional mortgage.
- If you need to move out while your home is being renovated, we have a "no payment option" during the construction period to help you afford the increased housing expense.

Par East is a mortgage broker registered with NYS Banking Dept. Loans are arranged with third party providers. All programs are subject to change without notice. Program described is offered by the wholesale lending division of Chevy Chase Bank, FSB

It's Time to Pay off Equity Loans AND Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

Recent increases in the prime rate have homeowners scrambling to consolidate high rate home equity loans and lines of credit.

Many took out these loans when banks were pushing them as a replacement for conventional mortgages and enticing consumers with no closing cost teasers. Well, now it's time to anti up.

"Equity loans should not be used for long term financing" says John Sauro, President of North Atlantic Mortgage Corp. "It's likely the prime rate will increase another half percent before years end, pushing homeowner's payments even higher"

So what should you do?

Many have decided to refinance their first mortgage and the equity loan into one mortgage while rates are still low. "You can still get a great rate and there are programs available that can considerably lower monthly payments. A five minute consultation could result in significant savings."

Do you need to refinance?

But don't know who to trust?

Hauppauge, NY – This is a task many of us dread. At one time or another in our lives we have to refinance, whether it's to get some money to dormer your house or to consolidate your bills. Often, refinancing is the only way you can accomplish these goals. You come to this realization and then dread the road that lies ahead. What do you do now? Who do you call? What questions do you ask?

I have a confession to make. I, myself have refinanced three times in the last five years. And you know what? I was ripped off twice!! All three times I prepared myself for the process and figured I would do it right and get a good deal. Not a chance!!

I GOT TRICKED TWICE!!

How infuriating! You have to refinance, there's no way around it and you are forced into this process that the mortgage lenders have formulated to force you to play by their rules. Sometimes you get a document called a Good Faith Estimate (GFE). What a joke these things are! These GFEs are supposed to tell you what your interest rate is and what your closing costs are. You get this thing and say, "OK, my closing costs are $10,000 and my interest rate is 6.25%". Then you go to the closing and everything is different! This is called:

THE OLD BAIT AND SWITCH.

The loan officer who has been so charming, helpful and nice explains to you how the GFE is only an estimate and the rate is "only" one half a percent higher and the closing costs are "only" a couple of thousand more. He tells you it's essentially the same and that you should sign. Meanwhile, your contractor has your house half apart and your credit cards are late and collectors are calling you at your job!! SO ..... you sign. That's what I did.

The second time I refinanced I thought I was getting a fixed rate. Then the same thing happened. I went to the closing and the paperwork said I was getting an adjustable rate! Can you believe it?? This loan had an interest rate that adjusted every 6 months. The loan officer (who looked younger than my 23 year old son) told me it was because my credit score was too low. NONSENSE! My credit scores were over 700, which is excellent. I knew this because I had done my homework and got a copy of my credit report. BUT ... Unfortunately, I went ahead with it anyway because I was an idiot. You would have thought that I had learned my lesson from the last time. But no! I was due for 2 mortgage payments and the phone calls from my mortgage company were coming fast and furious.

Well, the mortgage adjusted 2 times in the first year and my payment had gone up over $500.00!! I had to refinance again before my rate screamed up to a million percent!! But

THIS TIME WOULD BE DIFFERENT!!

I finally got the answers I was looking for. I read an article in a local paper about a mortgage expert who had written a report on how to go about refinancing your home and how you can make sure you can't possibly be taken advantage of and ripped off. The article gave a toll free number to call to get a copy of the Free Report mentioned in the ad. As much as I hate answering machines, I was pleased to listen to a recorded message with an option to get the "Free Report" sent by mail. When the Free Report came, I finally understood what I was doing wrong!

The Free report explained that most people make the simple mistake of not getting the loan disclosures mailed to them. Unfortunately, most people just hear WHAT THEY WANT TO HEAR! Just because they say you are going to get that great rate at such low fees doesn't mean you're actually going to get it!! Don't let this happen to you! You learn what to ask for from the mortgage lender you're dealing with.

The mortgage industry is one of the most highly regulated in the country because of all the abuse of these predatory lenders. You learn who these guys are and how to avoid them. Does it sound like maybe this author and I are a little paranoid? Well, when you're dealing with your home, don't you think

YOU SHOULD BE PARANOID?

Just look at what this Free Report tells you: The 10 questions you must ask any mortgage lender, the six things your lender doesn't want you to know, and lastly, the six biggest and costliest mistakes made when refinancing.

As a very experienced financial analyst, I give this report my highest recommendation. You're crazy if you don't at least call to get a copy of the Free Report for yourself. To receive this Free Report call the toll free number:

1-888-355-0091 Extension 8070

for a free 24 hour recorded message. Finally, someone figured out a way to give the public the real scoop on the bank and mortgage industry. Call Now!

TWO THUMBS UP! YAH!

ALSO ... the author of this free report (on a very limited basis) gives you the option to let him give you free advice himself. I strongly advise you to select this option. You just tell them you want to deal with the President of the company on the recorded message and they will send you an analysis form to fill out and the President of the company will personally call you back and give you a free phone consultation. Wow!! This is what I did. He gave me incredible advice and got me a great deal and an education to last me a lifetime. I can't thank him enough.

This Free Report is provided by Long Island Home Mortgage located at 700 Veterans Memorial Hwy. Hauppauge, NY 11788 (877-724-9010). They are a registered mortgage broker with the NY State Banking Department and mortgage loans are arranged with third party providers.

Nothing says more about who you are,
than where you live. So at Corcoran, we dedicate ourselves to understanding you.

How you're virtually inseparable—but that you all need a little space of your own. That could mean a rambling new family room... or two new bedrooms—with a connecting door. And a home that does more than fit you. It suits you.

It's the only way to make sure that where you live, will be who you are.
